INTRODUCTION.

THE Trojan Dames is in many respects the best of the plays of Euripides for school reading. The four plays edited by Porson are in the hands of every schoolboy, yet they were chosen for annotation by that great scholar, not because they were the best instruments to the hand of the teacher, but because they are preserved in a great number of codices, and came first in those which he chiefly used. At least three of these four plays are less fitted than most of the works of Euripides to be put into the hands of schoolboys, and none of them, I think, are so suitable for this purpose as the Troades.

This play does not derive its interest from the evolution of a plot. Perhaps one might say that in this particular condition of dramatic excellence the Troades is the weakest, while the Oedipus Tyrannus of Sophocles is the strongest, of the extant Greek plays. The Troades can hardly be said to have a plot. It may be described in the fine phrase of Tennyson as

“A fiery scroll written over with lamentation and woe.”

But it has many conspicuous merits. Its Choral Odes are of singular brilliancy and skill. The Ode beginning at verse 794 is a matchless piece of workmanship. In my note on that passage I have pointed out the splendid perfection of literary execution which Euripides has there achieved. I have also adverted in the notes to passages in which the poet shows his characteristic tenderness and subtle power of psychological analysis. The play abounds in displays of dialectic cunning and rhetorical ingenuity. It should be remembered that these ἐπιδείξεις had for the Athenians all the charms which a spectacle had for the Romans and has still for us.

The date of the play was the eventful year 415 B.C. It was the last play of its trilogy; hence, perhaps, the almost disproportionate development of the lyrical parts of the drama. The musical element seems to have been, as a rule, most prominent in the last play of a trilogy. The two other plays were the Alexandrus and the Palamedes, with the Sisyphus as the Satyric supplement. We read that the poet did not gain the prize, which was awarded to Xenocles with the Oedipus, Lycaon, Bacchae, and the Satyric Athamas.

In preparing this edition I have consulted throughout the recognized authorities. But very little has been done for the Troades. The edition of G. Burges, in which the play is virtually re-written, is of no practical use. Bothe's edition of 1845 is the most serviceable. I have taken as the basis of the text that of Dindorf in his Poetae Scenici Graeci, 1870. When I depart from the text of Dindorf in favour of my own views or those of others, I point out the divergence in the commentary.

The MSS. on which Dindorf has based his text are V (Nauck's B), the Codex Vaticanus 909, of the 12th century, and P (Nauck's B), the Codex Vaticanus Palatinus 287, of the 14th century. Both these MSS. are now in Rome, the latter, as its name imports, came originally from the Palatinate. It is the same MS. on which we have to depend solely for the last half of the Bacchae, of which the first 754 lines are found also in C. It is a singular thing that this C, which omits the last half of the Bacchae, omits also the whole of the Troades, though it contains all the other plays of Euripides. It is strange too that Stobaeus, who quotes so copiously from the other plays of Euripides, seems not to have known the Troades at all. The other MSS. which contain the Troades are the Codices Harniensis (C), Harleianus (A), and Neapolitanus (the last containing the Scholia); but these codices are not valuable for critical purposes, as they may be traced back to V c P, or codices closely resembling one or other of these: they are all of course much later than V and P, and abound in worthless conjectures.

The Christus Patiens, being a patchwork of phrases chiefly from the Bacchae, Troades, Hippolytus, and Rhesus, throws some light on the text. I have again toiled through this extremely dull drama, but I have not found it by any means so useful in the criticism of the Troades as in the criticism of the Bacchae. I have carefully read the Troades of Seneca, and have recorded in the notes such parallels as seemed instructive.

On grammatical points I have referred to Madvig's Greek Syntax and Goodwin's Greek Moods and Tenses. I have contented myself with a reference to Liddell and Scott, where it seemed that the Lexicon gave sufficient information. As it is possible that my edition of the Bacchae may be in the hands of some readers of this book, I have referred to it from time to time, to avoid a repetition of the same note. I have taken pains to preserve, so far as I could, in translating, the dignity of the original. A boy should not be encouraged to think that the Greek poets were bald and frigid. Translations of the Greek Tragic poets like those of Professor Jebb really inspire a learner with admiration for the works which he is studying—an admiration which rapturous eulogies of the Greek masterpieces often fail to awake. At the end of the volume will be found an Appendix on the metres of the lyrical parts of the play.

The notes enclosed within square brackets with the initials H. C. appended are by Mr. Hastings Crossley, M.A., of Dublin, and some time Professor of Greek in Queen's College, Belfast. Other more or less recent comments on the Troudes have been drawn from the Classical Review, Bursian's Jahresbericht, and occasionally from monographs, as, for instance, that of Dr. J. Heinsch. It will be seen that I have received some very judicious and scholarly comments from Mr. Stanley, formerly a distinguished student of Trinity College, Dublin, a Scholar of the House and Senior Moderator, now Vice-Principal of the Campbell College near Belfast. I have also, with Mr. Way's permission, beautified my edition by frequent quotations from his scholarly and artistic Euripides in English Verse (Vol. II., Macmillan, 1896).

NOTES.

3. ἔξειλίσσουσιν. This word properly means to unroll, as in Hipp. 864; so also ἔξ. λόγον, ‘unfold a tale,’ in Ion 397. But ἔξειλίσσειν often has the same meaning as ἐλίσσειν, ‘to cause to revolve, roll, whirl’; the prep. merely indicating a more complicated evolution, as in H. F. 977, ἔξειλίσσων παῖδα κίονος κύκλω, where the child is described as being chased round and round the στῦλος ποδῆρης, or pillar which supported the roof of the house. Xenophon uses ἔξειλίσσειν τὴν φάλαγγα in the sense ‘to deploy’; cp. Lat. explicare. Hesychius has ἔξειλίσσουσι, κινούσι, probably referring to this passage. We might translate ‘weave of their beauteous paces mazy circles’; cp. Tennyson, Vivien, “*a charm Of wove*n* paces and of waving hands.*”

4. ἄμφι ... περίξ, a common pleonasm, so κύκλω περίξ, ἄμφι περί.

5. ἔπειτα κανόνισιν = στάθμη, as often used by Homer in the phrase ἐπὶ στάθμῳ. Though κανών and στάθμη are both enumerated in ἔπειτα ὄν carpenters’ stock in trade in Plat. Phil. 56 B, yet they cannot be said to be expressly distinguished, as στάθμη, ‘chalked line,’ and κανών, ‘rule’ (as L. and S. say, s. v. στάθμη). On the contrary, the κανών, as well as the στάθμη was ‘a red chalked line’ (rubrica rather than amussis), as we see from H. F. 945, φοίνικι κανόνι ἡρμοσμένα. So the schol. on ἐπὶ στάθμην ἔθνευ has στάθμην, κανόνα, ὑπομεμιλτωμένον σχοινίον: and Lucian, Icaromenipp. 14 has ἐπεὶ καὶ τοὺς τέκτονας πολλάκις ἑωρακέναι μοι δοκῶ θατέρω τῶν ὀφθαλμῶν ἄμεινον πρὸς τοὺς κανόνας ἀπειθίνοντας τὰ ξύλα, with which cp. Pers. i. 66, “oculo rubricam dirigat uno.” From this usage of getting a straight direction by dropping a ruddled line comes the proverb found in Plat. Charm. 154 B, ἀτεχνῶς λευκὴ στάθμη εἰμι πρὸς τοὺς καλοὺς, ‘I have absolutely no power of measuring,’ i. e. ‘I am as useless as would be a στάθμη without μίλτος on it.' So Soph. Frag. 306 :

τοῖς μὲν λόγοις τοῖς σοῖσιν οὐ τεκμαίρομαι,
οὐ μᾶλλον ἢ λευκῷ λίθῳ λευκὴ στάθμη.

7. εὖνοια. Constr. εὖνοια Φρυγῶν πόλει, 'good-will to Troy.' ἀπέστη cannot be taken with πόλει, as it would require to be followed by a genitive: εὖνοια, else the final a could not be elided; yet we have ἀνοιά in Andr. 520.

9. Παρνάσιος = Φωκεύς.

12. ὀλέθριον βάρος :

"Fashioned the horse whose womb was fraught with arms,
And sent within your town its ruin-load."—W.

14. δούρειος. This word is here used in a different sense from ἵππος δουράτεος in the Odyssey, and "durateus ecus," Lucr. i. 477; the latter words mean 'wooden,' but here, as is plain from the context, δούρειος is not 'wooden,' but = ἐγκύμων τευχέων, fetus armis. Cp. Val. Flac. ii. 573, "duria nox."

16. φονῶ καταρρεῖ, 'with blood are dripping.' This is perhaps a more probable rendering than 'are ruining' mid the slaughter,' though the latter would be a better expression and would involve the far more normal use of καταρρεῖ: but the slaughter was over, and the ruin was consummated.

κρηπίδων. κρηπίς, Lat. crēpido, is the basis or pedestal of a building, especially of a temple or altar, as here. Hence, below 215, the plains of Thessaly are called 'the lovely pedestal (κρηπίδα) of Olympus.'

23. νικῶμαι. Verbs which imply the idea of a comparison take the genitive; hence e.g. νικᾶσθαι, λείπεσθαι, περιγίγνεσθαι, διαφέρειν τινος: cp. ἐκαλλιστεῖετο πασῶν γυναικῶν. ἡστέρησε τῆς μάχης, Xen. An. i. 7. 12, 'was after as regalia'; ἡστέρησε, i.e. 'was late for the battle.'

26. ἐρημία. This word often means 'depopulation,' 'lution,' sometimes 'unprotectedness'; both are included in Milton's 'ruin bare'; see below, 97, 565, and Frag. 825 :

αἱ γὰρ πόλεις εἰς ἄνδρες, οὐκ ἐρημία.

27. νοσεῖ, 'ill fare the gods without their wonted honours.' Eur. nearly always uses νοσεῖν in a metaphorical sense. For θέλει = φιλεῖ = solet, cp. Thuc. ii. 89, ἡσσημένων δ' ἀνδρῶν οὐκ ἐθέλουσιν αἱ γυνῶμαι ... ὁμοίαι εἶναι. This verb is also often used to express a future event, like our will or shall as the sign of the future, as ταῦτὸν τάναντία ποιεῖν ἢ πάσχειν ... οὐκ ἐθέλησει, Plat. Rep. 436 B. The gods of a deserved city were supposed to leave it, as no longer receiving sacrifices; Aesch. Sept. 207, θεοὺς | τοὺς τῆς ἀλοΐσης πόλεος ἐκλείπειν λόγος.

29. βοᾶ, 're-echoes,' as in P. 265, ἠΐονες βοῶσι. So βοᾶσθαι in Hel. 1434.

31. Θησεΐδαι. Acamas and Demophon.

32. ἀκληροί. Not 'unallotted' (as L. and S.), for we see inf. 249, that they were already allotted; but 'unballoted for,' as having been set aside each as the γέρας ἐξαίρετον of some leading Greek chieftain. Matthiae quotes from a grammarian in Becker's Anecdota, ἀκληροί ἔξω τοῦ κεκληρωῖσθαι, Εὐριπίδης, a gloss which probably refers to this passage. The usual meaning is 'without lot,' 'destitute,' or (with gen.) 'without share of,' 'destitute of.'

33. ἐξηρημέναι, 'reserved as a γέρας ἐξαίρετον.'

37. πάρεστιν. For the unnatural position of this word, cp. note on Bacch. 860, where I have quoted instances of the figure called hyperbaton in Eur.

40. λάθρα. Hec. did not yet know of the sacrifice of Polyxena; see 260 ff. Many edd. prefer οἰκτρὰ of P to λάθρα of V. The latter is the much less likely word to have been introduced by conjecture, and is probably right. The use of the word absolutely in the sense of 'without her knowledge' is very unusual. The change of ἦ to ἥς in the foregoing verse would obviate this objection, but is not absolutely necessary.

42. μεθήκ', 'permitted to remain a virgin,' 'spared her maidenhood.' So inf. 253, ᾧ γέρας ἔδωκ' ἄλεκτρον ζῶαν. Cp. ἐλευθέραν μεθέντες, Ilec. 550; and μεθήμ' Ἐρμιόνην ἀπὸ σφαγῆς, Or. sub fin.

δρομάδα, 'frantic,' 'frenzied'; the Eumenides are called δρομάδες in Or. 837, (cp. φοιτὰς νόσος), and λύσσα is called ἐλαφρά in Bacch. 851.

44. σκότιον, 'as a concubine'; cp. 252, and Z. 24; the word is applied to concubinage, ἀδαδούχητοι γάμοι, as a schol. on Homer calls them. Though γαμεῖ might for its form be future, yet it is probably present, as the present is used throughout, and Poseidon would not foretell this fact, and this only. For the present used for the future, to express likelihood, intention, see Goodwin, § 10, note 7.

45. εὐτυχούσα. The present participle, like the present infinitive, is also used as an imperfect. (See Goodwin, § 16, 2.)

50. λύσασαν. λυσάση would also be good Greek, but it is much more usual to use the construction of the accusative before the infinitive, ἔξεστι (ἐμοί), λύσασαν (ἐμέ) τὴν πάρος ἔχθραν, προσεννέπειν τὸν γένει μὲν ἀγχιστον πατρός, μέγαν τε δαίμον' ἐν θεοῖς τε τίμιον. The difference between the two constructions might be thus indicated by translation: ἔξεστί μοι λυσάση κ.τ.λ. might be literally rendered, 'Is it permitted to me, having put aside our feud, to address,' etc. ἔξεστί μοι λύσασαν would be literally, 'Is it permitted for me, having put aside our feud, to address,' etc. It is to be observed that the construction of the accusative before the infinitive is preferred, not only when the dative after ἔξεστι is suppressed, as here, but even when the dative after ἔξεστι is expressed: ἔξεστί μοι λύσασαν προσεννέπειν, would be more regular than ἔξεστί μοι λυσάση προσεννέπειν, yet the exact reverse of this construction is found, Soph. O. R. 350, ἐννέπω σε ... ἀφ' ἡμέρας | τῆς νῦν προσανδᾶν μήτε τοῦσδε μήτ' ἐμέ, | ὡς ὄντι γῆς τῆσδ' ἀνοσίω μιάστορι, where the construction is as if he had first said ἐννέπω σοι, 'I command thee,' not ἐννέπω σε, 'I command that thou.'

53. ἐπήνεσ'. The aorist is sometimes used, especially by the dramatists, when a momentary action which is just taking place is to be expressed as if it had already happened, Goodwin, § 19. note 5; Madv. Syn. § 111 b. ἦνεσα, ἐπήνεσα, ἦσθην, ἀπέπτυσσα are the most common examples of this usage, but we also find ἐφρόντισσα, below 1046; ῥώμωξα, Med. 791; κατεδάκρυσσα, Hel. 673; κατῶκτειρα, Irl. A. 469; ἐδεξάμην, Soph. El. 668; ἐχάρην, Ar. Av. 743; ἐγέλασα, Ar. Eq. 686. Thus here the aorist gives the sense of prompt and hearty acquiescence, as in Or. 1670, καὶ λέκτρ' ἐπήνεσ' ἠνίκ' ἀν διδῶ πατήρ, 'I at once accept her as my wife'; and Med. 707, οὐδὲ ταῦτ' ἐπήνεσα, 'I at once declare my disapproval'; τῆσδε δ' οὐκ ἐφρόντισσα, Tro. 1046, 'I at once declare my indifference to her.' We also find in this idiom the periphrasis of the aorist part. with ἔχω, e.g. αἰνέσας ἔχω. The aorists ἦνεσα, ἐπήνεσα, closely following present αἰνῶ, are found in Alc. 1093 ff., Ion 1609. Sometimes this idiom expresses, with a slightly altered shade of meaning, impatience rather than promptitude, as in Irl. A. 440, ἐπήνεσ' ἀλλὰ στείχε δωμάτων ἔσω, 'Tis well: enough: go in.' To this idiom also may be referred a kindred usage of the strong aorist in εἶπον, Med. 273, and the reply, ἔμαθον, or οὐκ ἔμαθον, in Plato.

56. τινός, 'any of the gods,' for 'any other one of the gods,' by a common idiom; conversely, we find phrases like γίγας ὄδ' ἄλλος, which does not mean 'here is another γίγας'

(like the former), but 'here is another, who (unlike the former) is a γίγας.' The conjunction καί when placed between εἶτε and the second alternative in disjunctive hypotheses has a special force noticed by Disсен. It always implies that the speaker himself decidedly prefers the first alternative. De Cor. 244. 57, εἶτε ἀληθῆ περὶ ἐμοῦ γέγραπται εἶτε καὶ μή. So here, 'from Zeus or (which is less probable) from one of the other gods'; δαίμονες is here, as often, equivalent to θεοί. It is not likely that Athenè should be regarded by Poseidon as the possible bearer of a message from one of the 'lower deities' especially distinguished from the θεοί as δαίμονες. It is to be noticed that inf. 942 seems not to bear out Disсен's rule, which is perhaps a reason for accepting Nauck's view of the reading there; see note on 941.

58. κοινήν, 'that I may unite it with mine.'

59. νν. When a phrase or periphrase contains absolutely only one idea, so that it is really equivalent to a single verb, as here εἰς οἶκτον ἦλθες is quite equivalent to ᾤκτειρας, then the phrase, just as if it were a single verb, can govern an accusative, which is sometimes called the accusative remotioris objecti. Thus νν is here the accusative remotioris objecti, governed by εἰς οἶκτον ἦλθες = ᾤκτειρας: so in Soph. El. 123, τάκεις οἰμωγᾶν Ἀγαμέμνονα, the phrase τάκεις οἰμωγᾶν = οἰμώξεις, and governs Ἀγαμέμνονα in the accusative; and in Aesch. Suppl. 528, γένος νέωσον ... αἶνον = γένος ἐκ νέας αἶνει, 'recall the legend of our race.' We meet the same idiom in Eur. below, 152, 335, and in ἄχεα ... βοᾶ τὸν προδόταν, Med. 205; βοῆν ἔστησας ἀγγελον, Heracl. 656; στένω σε μέλος, Or. 1383; ἐπενφημήσατε παιᾶνα Ἄρτεμιν, Iph. A. 1468; τόνδε ... δίκην μέτειμι, Bacch. 345. See other instances of this usage quoted on Bacch. 1289; and see note on 239.

The phrase, ποῖ μ' ἵπεξάγεις πόδα, Her. 812, which is usually classed with the above, really rests on a different principle; the Greek poets add to the object-accusative of a person the accusative of the part of the body (including φρένας ψυχῆν and such words) to which the action refers; cp. μέθες με, πρὸς θεῶν, χεῖρα, Soph. Phil. 1301. Madv. Greek Syntax, § 31, Rem. 2. See inf. 408.

60. κατηθαλωμένης. Supply Τροίας from verse 57. This use of the genitive absolute is common enough, especially in Aeschylus; see Aesch. Suppl. 115, 437, Prom. 880, Theb. 236, 263, Ag. 937, Eum. 742. A very strong case of this genitive is usually recognized in Med. 910, where (as in Aesch. Suppl. 437, if sound) the participle comes between the verb and the dependent case; but Med. 910 is a rather suspicious passage (see Verrall's note), and Aesch. Suppl. 437 may be construed differently, as he suggests. Cp. 76.

61. ἐκέισε, illuc primum praevertere, 'first go back to my request for aid.'

68. ὄν ἄν τύχης, 'at random.'

70. εἶλκε, a vox propria for offering violence to a woman; cp. Λητώ γὰρ ἔλκεσε (from the collat. form ἐλκέω), λ. 580.

71. κούδέν γ'. The ellipse of κακῶς is unusual with πάσχειν, still more so with ἀκούειν. Nauck conjectures κού δείν' for κούδέν' γ', as γ' is omitted in the best MSS.

72. ἔπερσάν γ'. ἔπέρσαντ', MSS. This certain correction is due to Victorius. There is a frequent confusion between Γ and Τ.

75. δύσνοστον νόστον. Eur. seems to affect this sort of expression; cp. γάμους δυσγάμους, Phoen. 1062; δυσθρηνήτοις θρήνοις, Iph. T. 143; δυσφήμους φήμας, Hec. 193. We have in Eur. very many adjectives of this form, e.g. δυσέρως, δυστράπεζος, δυσαιών, δυσθάνατος, δυσκέλαδος, δύσσυμφος, δύσχορτος, so also δυσλόφως, below 303. We find a rare subst. so formed in δυσχλαινία, Hec. 240, and a very strange formation in δυσσελένα, 'ill-starred Helen,' Or. 1388; cp. δύσπαρις, Γ. 39, also αἰνόπαρις, Hec. 944. For μενότων in v. 76, see note on 60.

82. τὸ σόν, sc. μέρος, 'for your part,' accus. in apposition to the sentence; see on 386.

84. μυχόν, the part of the coast between Caphareus and Geraestus, as Blakesley shows on Hdt. viii. 14, τὰ κοῖλα τῆς Εὐβοίας.

85. εἰσεβεῖν. This verb is found with accusative again in Aesch. Ag. 338, Eum. 260, 973, Phoen. 1320, etc., but in all these places Porson would write εἶσεβεῖν, "videntur tragici dixisse εἶσεβειν θεοὺς et εἰσεβεῖν εἰς θεοὺς." Against this distinction it is urged (1) that we find εἰσεβεῖσθαι passive in Antipho 123. 42, and Plat. Axioch. 364; (2) that ἀσεβεῖν is found with accusative (which is very doubtful); and (3) that it would be awkward here to read εἶσεβειν on account of the recurrence of σέβειν in next line; this consideration, however, is not of much weight, for in Hec. 526 ff. χεροῖν, χεροῖν, χειρὶ occur in three consecutive lines, in El. 411 γαιας and γῆς are found in the same line, πόδα is twice in Bacch. 647, πόνον and πόνος are the final words of lines 127, 128, of Aesch. Eum. For ὡς followed by ἄν with conjunctive in final clauses, cp. 1263 below; see Goodwin, § 44, note 2.

87. ἡ χάρις, 'the favour you ask of me requires but few words' (to express my assent to it), viz. ἔσται τὰδ'.

94. ἐξιῆ κάλως. Used metaphorically in Med. 278, ἐξιῶσι πάντα δὴ κάλων, 'are letting out every inch of rope,' i.e. 'are straining every nerve,' so φόνιον ἐξιέτι κάλων, H. F. 837, a very fine expression. Blakesley on Hdt. ii. 36, holds that this phrase means 'to shake out the reefs' in fine settled weather. Cp. Med. 770.

95-98. Mr. Way well preserves the thought :

" Fool, that in sack of towns lays temples waste,
And tombs the sanctuaries of the dead !
He sowing desolation reaps destruction."

98-152. I agree with Mr. Way, who imagines Hecuba to be lying asleep on the stage during the dialogue between Poseidon and Athenè. Some such supposition seems to be absolutely required. She could hardly come on after their departure, lie down, and forthwith call upon herself to get up. The words οὐκέτι ... Τροίας suggest the dazed condition of one who, waking under unaccustomed circumstances, finds a difficulty in realizing at first where she is. Assuming that she is there, it follows that she is asleep, or apparently so, since the proprieties of the Greek stage would forbid any movement on her part distracting the attention of the spectators from the dialogue between the gods. In no case, however, would her presence create any difficulty, gods being neither visible nor audible to mortals except at their own pleasure. This wail of Hecuba is given in the old editions without any division into strophe and antistrophe. Nauck regards the ode as beginning to be antistrophic at 153 ; Dind. recognizes its antistrophic character from 122 ; but I think there can be little doubt that it is antistrophic throughout. By writing αἰαῖ for αἰαῖ αἰαῖ in 105, and by omitting τί δὲ θρηνηῆσαι, as very probably a gloss on τί δὲ μὴ σιγᾶν in 110, we have an antistrophic correspondence throughout. If we regard the ode up to 122 as non-antistrophic, it must be allowed that we meet a very strange phenomenon in so close an approach to antistrophic correspondence in a monostrophic piece. The metre is all anapaestic, chiefly consisting of two measures or four feet (anapaests being scanned by dipodies), each strophe and antistrophe of course ending with a paroemiac : but presenting in the second strophe and antistrophe some instances of anap. monom. hypermeter, as Ἑλλάδος εἰόρμους, as well as spondaic paroemiacs, as ἐς τάνδ' ἐξώκειλ' ἄταν, which are not allowed in more elaborate anapaestic systems. Other liberties are the neglect of caesura after the first two feet, and the admission of dactyls followed by anapaests. In 122 the first verse of strophe β', a license has been overlooked by the edd. which would violate that συναρθεία (or mutual connection of all the verses in a system, so that the whole system is one verse) which is the leading feature of anapaestic systems. By the very slight change of ὠκείαι to ὠκείαις I have remedied this defect; ὠκείαις would naturally have been assimilated to the case of πρῶραι, with which, at first sight, it would seem to agree; but it really agrees with κώπαις in the next verse.

98. ἄνα = ἀνάστηθι, as frequently. There is no warrant for making ἄνα = ἀνάειρε. In 544 ἀνά is separated by tnesis from ἐμελπον. The verb ἀναμέλπω is found in Theocr. xvii. 113; ἄνα, of course, could not stand for ἄνασσα, as has been suggested. The τ' after δέρην was rightly added by Musgr.

100. τάδε, 'no Troy have we here any more, no more are we lords of Troy.' This is a common idiom, best illustrated by οὐχ' Ἐκτωρ τάδε, Andr. 108; see L. and S. ὄδε III.

101-104. Metaphors from ships prevail in this ode (see especially 117, 118): κατὰ πορθμόν is secundo flumine, πρὸς κῆμα, adverso flumine: hence κατὰ δαίμονα is 'as fate ordains.'

104. τύχαις, 'tis disaster that impels thy bark.' τύχαι sometimes means 'chance,' as in Thuc. i. 78. But in the plural this word generally = 'mishaps,' as inf. 349, Or. 4, Andr. 973, and perhaps in 1204 below; πλεῖν τύχαις is an expression like πλεῖν βορέη ἀνέμῳ, πλεῖν αὔρα κ.τ.λ. Mr. Way well renders:

"Breast not with thy prow the surges of life, who on waves of disaster, alas! art tost."

108. ξυστελλόμενος, another nautical expression.

113. κλισίας, 'bed,' 'resting-place'; for the genitives in this passage, see Madv. Greek Syntax, § 61, Rems. 1 and 2; also Bacch. 263 note, 693 note.

116-119. ὡς ... ἐλέγους. 'How I crave to roll round my back, yea my spine, and to toss it to this side and that (as a rocking ship sways her keel now to larboard now to starboard) as I ever take up the burden of my piteous wailing.' The aged queen, swaying her body in time to her keening, figures herself as an old bark rocking on the heaving sea. The metaphor is so powerful as to strike modern ears at first as grotesque; but the passage rightly considered is pathetic and artistic in the highest degree. Seidler first detected the nautical metaphor in ἀμφότεροι τοίχοι, a phrase often applied to the sides of a ship, e.g. in Theocr. xxii. 12, ἀνέρρηξαν δ' ἄρα τοίχους | ἀμφοτέρους. So also the schol. on Ar. Ran. 536. quotes from the Ἄλλημῆνη of Eur. these verses :

οὐ γὰρ ποτ' εἶων Σθένηλον ἐπὶ τὸν εὐτυχήν
χωροῦντα τοῖχον τῆς τύχης σ' ἀποστερεῖν, adding this explanation, εἶρηται δὲ ἐκ μεταφορᾶς τῶν ἐπιβατῶν τῆς νεώς, οἱ, θατέρου μέρους αὐτοῖς κατακλιζομένου, πρὸς τὸ ἕτερον μεθίστανται. For διαδοῦναι, cp. Or. 1267, where Dind. rightly reads κόρας διάδοτε, 'roll round your eyes'; and so διατρέχειν, 'to run hither and thither.' I take μελέων as an adj., and punctuate after τοίχους. Mr. Way's version is very spirited :

"I yearn to rock me and sway—as a bark whose bulwarks roll in the trough of the sea—
To my keening, the while I wail my chant of sorrow and weeping unceasingly,
The ruin-song never link'd with the dance, the jangled
music of misery."

119. ἐπιούσ'. This is the admirable conjecture of Musgrave for ἐπὶ τοῖς, which would really give no meaning, for it could not mean, as Hermann renders, ad indulgendum perpetuo fluiti, but rather, as Paley points out, 'whatever songs of woe happen to present themselves,' like ὁ αἰεὶ ἄρχων, 'the archon for the time being.' But Musgrave's conjecture has in it all the elements of a certain emendation, for (1) it is a thoroughly appropriate word in itself; cp. τοὺς ἀναπαίστους ἐπίωμεν, Ar. Ach. 626; τίνα μοῦσαν ἐπέλθω, Hel. 165; (2) the construction would have puzzled the copyist, and made him write ἐπὶ τοῖς for ἐπιούσ': for the construction is πρὸς τὸ σημαίνον, the participle ἐπιούσα agreeing with ποθῶ implied in μοι πόθος (ἔστι) according to a very frequent Attic usage; cp. διασκοπῶν οὖν τοῦτον ... ἔδοξέ μοι, Plat. Apol. vi.; ὑπάρχει αὐτῇ ... διάγονσα, Phaed. xix.; αἰδῶς μ' ἔχει (αἰδοῦμαι) ... τυγχάνουσα, Hec. 970. For further examples see Madv. Greek Syntax, § 216. This construction occurs several times in this play, and will be noticed on each occurrence; see 531, 735, 852, 1090, 1209, 1223.

120. μούσα. Cp. 605; the wretched are denied that enjoyment of song which in Med. 192 ff. Eur. places so high among the pleasures and solaces of life: their only strain must be the recital of their woes; yet even this is some solace. χαῖτη = καὶ αὐτή; Kirch. and Nauck give καῦτή = καὶ αὐτή.

122. ὠκέαις. See note on 98 sub fin. The ships of the Greeks are apostrophized.

124. λίμνας is Hartung's conjecture accepted by Dind. for λιμένας, which was explained by a reference to the fact that the ancients rarely trusted themselves into the open sea, always coasting except in very favourable weather. It seems nearly certain that Eur. wrote λίμνας, a word which he often uses for 'the sea,' as in Hec. 446, Hipp. 147. Of course, if λιμένας were read, there should be a further remodelling of the passage, for λιμένας is a tribrach, and not admissible into anap. verse.

126. αἰλῶν. The αἰλός, generally rendered 'a flute,' was more like the oboë or clarionet; στυγνός does not here mean 'ill-omened,' στυγνός παιὰν αἰλῶν is the 'horrid call of the clarionets,' for παιὰν was the 'war-song' which announced the beginning of the war, and it is called στυγνός from its sinister consequences. To perceive what the αἰλός really was, we must consider μοῦσα βαρύβρομος αἰλῶν, Ar. Nub. 313; δέξατο δ' εἰς χέρας βαρύβρομον αἰλὸν τερφθεῖσ' ἀλαλαγμῶ, Hel. 1351; so barbaraque horribili stridebat tibia cantu, Catull. xlv. 264.

127. εὐφθόγγω, 'the loud scream of the fifes,' not to be rendered 'auspicious.' From a fancied incompatibility between these two epithets (εὐφθογγος and στυγνός), edd. have conjectured ἀφθόγγω for εὐφθόγγω, and have even supposed εὐφθόγγω to be ironical.

128. βαίνουσαι. This word Hermann, followed by Paley, omits as a gloss. But it is vindicated by the strophic correspondence which these editors ignore, and it is absolutely required by the construction. The only reason for doubting the soundness of βαίνουσαι here is the rarity of the construction, βαίνουσαι Ἴλιον, 'wending to Ilios.' But this is actually a characteristic construction of Eur., which even attracted the notice of Aristophanes, and was parodied by him in the line, ἀτὰρ τί χρέος ἔβα με μετὰ τὸν Πασιάν; as we are told by the schol. on Arist. on that passage (Ar. Nub. 30): the same construction is found again in Hipp. 1371, Bacch. 527, etc. Compare the Miltonic construction, 'arrive the isle,' and translate the Aristophanic passage, 'But stay, what debt arrived me after Pasiás?'

πλεκτὰν ... ἐξηρτήσασθε. Edd. commonly read παιδείαν with the mss., and render 'fastened (rather 'hung out from your sterns') the twisted handiwork of Egypt (your byblus cables) in the bay of Troy.' But who will commit himself to the doctrine that πλεκτὰν Αἰγύπτου παιδείαν could mean 'the twisted handiwork (or 'growth') of Egypt,' i.e. cables made of byblus. Surely in this sense παίδευμα would be absolutely required. Such a use of παιδεία is not to be paralleled in Eur. or elsewhere. Without doubt πλεκτάν means 'a cable' (a frequent use in Eur.). For παιδείαν we must read παίδευμα, which probably owed its corruption into παιδείαν to the fact that some very ancient copyist did not know the substantive πλεκτάν, and changed παίδευμα to παιδείαν to make it agree with the supposed adjective πλεκτάν. The word παίδευμα excellently expresses the idea. An Egyptian product or manufacture, as that of cables out of byblus, may well be called in poetry 'a nursing of Egypt,' just as sheep are called in Andr. 1100, φυλλάδος Παρρησσίας παιδείματα. But παιδείαν could only mean something abstract, a process, and it would be stretching its meaning to an impossible degree to take it (as I have done in my former edition) as 'a lesson learnt from Egypt.' But even if it could bear that meaning, Eur. would hardly describe the simple manœuvre of riding at anchor instead of beaching the ship as a lesson learnt from Egypt, since riding at anchor was familiar to the Greeks from the time of Homer, who often mentions it (e.g. δ. 782, κ. 92-96). Besides, Hecuba would be far more likely to refer to the fact that byblus cables came from Egypt than to the theory that a well-known nautical practice had its origin there. We cannot, therefore, by any means explain παιδείαν. But I have already suggested a theory to account for its having superseded the true reading, παίδευμα. Moreover, in reading παίδευμ' (and ἐξαιάζωμεν in 198, the corresponding verse) we make room for αἰαί in this verse, which the edd. usually omit. For instances of sing. πλεκτάν, 'ye hung out (each) your cable,' see on Bacch. 724. I add Mr. Way's ingenious and vigorous version of the strophe:

“O ship-prows rushing
 To Ilium, brushing
 The purple-flushing sea with swift oars,
 Till flutes loud-ringing,
 Till fifes dread-singing,
 Proclaimed you swinging off Phrygian shores
 On hawsers plaited
 By Nile—ships fated
 To hunt the hated, the Spartan wife,
 Castor's defaming,
 Eurotas' shaming,
 A Fury claiming King Priam's life!
 Though sons he cherished
 Fifty, he perished,
 His murderess she: and, the misery-rife,
 Even me hath she wrecked on the rocks of strife.”

133. δυσκλείαν. Cp. εὐκλείαν, Aesch. Theb. 682: but δύσ-κλείαν in Med. 218.

135. σφάζει, 'is the murderess of,' i.e. 'caused the death of'; for the use of the present, cp. ἤδε τίκτει σε, 'she is thy mother,' Ion 1560, and see Goodwin, § 10, note 4. It is coordinated with aor. ἐξώκειλε. μέν is here balanced by τε, so below 642. It is balanced by ἀτάρ, below 343, 415; by καί, Hipp. 288; by ἀλλά, Or. 553, etc., frequently in the phrase μέν, ἀλλ' ὅμως, e.g. in 366 below.

137. ἐξώκειλ'. The nautical metaphor is again taken up.

146. ἐξαιάζωμεν. By reading ἐξαιάζωμεν (cp. 198) for αιάζωμεν and inserting έν in the corresponding verse 130, we get rid of the only monometers occurring in the whole of this anapaestic system, and thus make it more symmetrical and more expressive of the state of feeling which it represents.

148. ὄρνις. ὄρνισιν ὅπως is the reading of the mss., which, however, Dindorf on metrical grounds rejects. It would, if sound, be quite parallel to Hec. 398, ὅποια κισσὸς ὄρνις ὅπως τῆσδ' ἐξομαι, 'I, like the ivy, will cling to her as an oak'; so here 'I, as the mother bird, for you as the fledgelings, will raise the strain.' The metre would be equally well preserved by reading ὄρνισιν ὅπως ἄρξω μολπάν.

151. πλαγαῖς. The loud stamp (pedis surplatio, Cic.) by which the aged queen gave the signal for the dances in honour of the gods to begin.

152. ἐξῆρχον θεούς = 'raised-in-honour-of the gods'; ἐξῆρχον θεούς governs οἶαν: see on 59 above; similarly in Soph. El. 557, εἰ δέ μ' ὦδ' αἰεὶ λόγους ἐξῆρχες, the phrase λόγους ἐξῆρχες = προσεφώνεις, and governs μ' in the accusative.

154. ποῖ λόγος ἦκει, 'quo spectat oratio'; 'what mean the words which have reached us?'

156. ἀῖσσει. The first syllable is generally short in Eur., hence Seidler would read τάρβος for φόβος, but there are undoubted instances of ἀῖσσω in Eur. with ā, e.g. inf. 1086.

163. πατρώας. Many edd. change the reading to πατρίας, doubting whether the ω in πατρώας can be short, and whether the mss. have not given the word in mistake for πατρίας in the half-dozen places in which it appears with ω short in Eur. We have, however, Τρωάδος in 521; and the diphthong is short in παλαιός, El. 497; Βουιώτος, Iph. A. 245; γεραῖός, Herc. Fur. 446; Τροία, Soph. Aj. 424; οἰωνός, Soph. El. 1058; φιλαθήναιος, Ar. Vesp. 282. So it seems rash to change this word to πατρίας whenever the ω is to be short, merely because in the case of this word an alternative resembling it in form and meaning is ready to our hand.

165. μόχθων, 'to hear the words of doom, Out, dames of Troy, from your homesteads; the Argives betake them home,' cp. μόχθων κλύειν, Hel. 665. μόχθων is of course lit. 'your woe,' 'your disastrous fate,' which is presented to them in the summons of the conquerors, and might depend on μέλαι, 'wretched for your woes.'

171. αἰσχύναν, 'scortum Graecorum futuram, licet rates sit,' Brodaeus; cp. 1114, and δύσγαμον αἰσχύναν, Hel. 687.

172. ἀλγυνθῶ, sc. μή, 'let me not by the sight of her redouble my pain.' The force of μή is carried on; so in 100 above καὶ = οὔτε, so also in 633 below οὐδὲν negatives the whole sentence. See on 1171.

175. δμαθέντες, 'the dead,' cp. τὸν νεόδμητον νεκρόν, Rhes. 887; δμαθέντας γὰρ ἀνίστη, Alc. 127. Mr. Stanley would take δμαθέντας as 'conquered,' the whole phrase referring, I suppose, to the Trojans who have 'survived their defeat'; but such a sentiment would have been expressed differently.

178. μή, 'whether,' with the indicative marks that the speaker believes that the thing about which he is asking (or expressing anxiety) is true, as προὔξερυνήσω ... μή τις ... ἐν τρίβῳ φαντάζεται, Phoen. 93.

181. στέλλονται, 'are preparing to ply their oars' (κατὰ πρύμνας, 'by unloosing the cables at the stern').

186. κλήρου. κλήρος is not only 'the lots,' but 'the drawing of lots' = both sortes and sortitio.

188. τίς ... χώραν. The construction is τίς Ἀργείων ἢ Φθιωτῶν (ἄξει με), ἢ (τίς) εἰς νησαίαν χώραν ἄξει με δύστανον πόρσω Τροίας.

191. κηφήν. Hec. compares herself to a 'drone,' as being about to live supported by others as a slave: Pliny speaks of the drones as slaves to the bees; so also Tzetzes, καὶ ταῖς μελισσαῖς ὑπουργεῖ, ταῖταις ὑδρηφοροῦντα (Brodaeus). There is no authority for making κηφήν ever mean an 'aged bird' (as Paley translates it both here and at Bacch. 1364), or for making it mean anything else but a 'drone.' See Bacch. 1364, where the ms. reading δρμις is rejected for δρμιν by some edd., who apparently believe in this signification of κηφήνα.

194. τὰν παρὰ προθύροις. She fears that she will be forced to serve as portress or as children's attendant, she who once held royal state in Troy.

200. ἐξαλλάξω, 'no more shall I ply (shift) the nimble shuttle in Trojan looms'; so in Hec. 1060, ὄδον ἐξαλλάσσειν is 'to shift one's course,' taking now this way, now that.

201. νέατον, used as an adverb, 'for the last time'; this is the elegant conjecture of Seidler, for νέα τοι of the mss.

204. δαίμων, 'cursed be that night and that lot'; δαίμων is 'fate,' 'lot,' as in Soph. O. C. 76, πλήν τοῦ δαίμονος.

205. ἢ ... ἔσομαι, 'or I shall be kept as a servant to draw of the holy water of Pirenè'; ὑδάτων is partitive genitive, see Madv. Greek Syntax, § 51 d. Drawing water was the typical employment of slaves; see the passage from Tzetzes quoted on 192, and Z. 457, καί κεν ὕδωρ φορέοις κ.τ.λ. Readers will at once think of 'hewers of wood and drawers of water' in the Bible.

207-213. This is a characteristic passage; the chorus pays a compliment to Athens and Theseus (the ideal hero of Eur.), and deprecates a banishment to the hated land of the Eurotas, and the meeting, as a slave, with Menelaus, who brought Troy to nought. Corinth, Athens, Sparta, Thessaly, and Sicily are in turn referred to.

211. θεράπναν, 'abode.' I cannot understand in what way of construing the passage Paley makes θεράπναν 'handmaid' here. It is highly doubtful that θεράπνα ever means 'handmaid' in Eur. or any Attic poet. The only place in Eur. where it could possibly mean 'handmaid' is Hec. 482, and there it is not so taken by Paley (though it is by L. and S.). θεράπνη is a contracted form of θεράπαινα in Hymn to Apollo, 157, and Ap. Rhod. i. 786, but in those places it is a distinct epicism, and does not afford any ground for belief in the existence of such a meaning in an Attic poet. There is no place in Attic poetry where it may not bear the meaning of 'station,' 'abode,' and Hesych. explains θεράπνας by αἰλώνας, σταθμούς. Paley in his latest ed. gave up the interpretation of θεράπναν as 'handmaid,' and of κηφήν as 'an aged bird.'

212. Μενέλα, from Μενέλας, so 863, 1100. So we have Λαέρτιος beside Λάρτιος, Ἴφιγόνη and Ἴφιγένεια, Σθενέλας and Σθενέλαος, Ἐτεοκλέης and Ἐτεοκλῆς, and, in Homer, Πάτροκλος, Πατρόκλῆς, Πατρόκλευς, Μελάνθιος, Μελάνθευς.

215. κρηπίδ'. See on 16 supr.

217. εὐθάλει. Dor. for εὐθηλεῖ: we also find εὐθάλης (fr. εὔ, θάλλω).

218. τάδε δεύτερα. The construction is τάδε μοι δεύτερα (ἔστι), ἐλθεῖν ζαθέαν χώραν (τὰν Πηνειοῦ), δεύτερα μετὰ τὰν ἱερὰν Θησέως, 'next to (going to) the sacred land of Theseus, my next best lot were to go to the country of the Peneüs.' The poet says 'next to the land of Theseus,' meaning 'next to (going to) the land of Theseus,' just as Ar. Nub. 30 says, τί χρέος ἔβα με μετὰ τὸν Πασίαν, 'after Pasias,' meaning 'after (my debt to) Pasias.' For the use of δεύτερα cp. Frag. 252, τυραννίδ' ἢ θεῶν δευτέρα νομίζεται, i.e. 'next to the gods'; so πολὺν δεύτερον, Soph. O. C. 1226; and πολὺν δευτέρα, 'easily second,' Thuc. ii. 97.

221. ἀντήρη, 'over against Phoenice' (i.e. the Phoenician settlement of Carthage), a vague geographical description of Sicily. I have removed the comma from χώραν to Σικελῶν. The whole periphrasis is: 'the Aetnaean land of the Sicilians, sacred to Hephaestus (in reference to its volcanoes), over against Phoenice, and mother of mountains' (a poetical expression for ὄρεινήν).

223. καρύσσεισθαι. In reference to Sicilian successes (especially those of Hiero) in the public games, for which see Pindar passim.

224. τὰν τ' ἀγχιστεύουσαν γᾶν. Probably Thurii, between the rivers Crathis and Sybaris.

225. ναίον is the conjecture of Dind. for ναῦται, ναῦτα of the mss. It is perhaps the best attempt which has been made to restore the corrupted word, but is by no means certain. As to the form ναίον for ναίοιμι, cp. Frag. 895, ἄφρων ἂν εἶην εἰ τρέφωιν τὰ τῶν πέλας, where τρέφωιν is explained by the grammarian as ἀπὸ τοῦ τρεφοίην κατὰ συγκοπήν τοῦ η. This appears to recognize οιν as a termination of the optative, but it is strange that it does not oftener occur.

227. ξανθὰν πυρσαίνων. Proleptic, like εὐάνδρον ὀλβίζων, see Bacch. 1055 note. That the waters of the Crathis dyed the hair auburn, we have the evidence of several scholiasts and grammarians cited by Brodaeus and Barnes, and that of Ovid, Met. xv. 315, Crathis et hinc Sybaris nostris conterminus arvis | electro similes faciunt auroque capillos.

232. ἔξανύων, 'to bring to an end,' 'finish,' often applied to words like δρόμον, πόρον, and so to ἶχνος, here 'to bring his quick step to its journey's end.' More daring is πόλον ἔξανύσας, Or. 1685, where ἔξ = 'to arrive at a place,' with accus. loci; so also Suppl. 1142, and ζυγά δ' ἤνυσεν, below 595.

239. This verse consists of three dochmii — — — | — — | — | — — | — — | — || — — — | — — | —. A word has dropped out, perhaps πάρεσθ', as Dind. suggests. In ὁ φόβος ἦν, the phrase

φόβος ἦν is treated as = έφοβούμην, and governs δ in the accus. This rests on the same principle as the cases quoted on 59 above, but I treat it separately, because in the case of pronouns the true construction is often mistaken: for instance, here many editors would explain δ as nom. in apposition to φόβος: but in that case it should be δς, attracted into the gender of φόβος: moreover, such an explanation would prove inapplicable to many analogous passages, e.g. Ion 572, τοῦτο κάμ' ἔχει πόθος, where κάμ' ἔχει πόθος = καί ἐγὼ ποθῶ and governs τοῦτο: so μάντις ἦσθα = έμαντείου governs τάδε, Heracl. 65; φόβος (έστὶ) = φοβούμαι governs τοῦτο, Heracl. 739; and μομφὴν ἔχω = μέμφομαι governs ἐν, Or. 1068. For the attraction which δ would suffer if it were in apposition to φόβος, cp. Hel. 282, δ δ' ἀγλαΐσμα δωμάτων ἐμοῦ τ' ἔφν | θυγάτηρ ἀνανδρος πολιά παρθενεύεται. The last words of the verses just quoted offer a good example of the adverbial use of the neut. plur. of an adj.; πολιά, of course, could not be nom. fem. for an obvious reason; the last syllable of πολιά would then be long, and thus we should have a spondee in the fourth place. See also on 348 below.

242. Καδμείας. This word, which ought to mean Theban, must be used to mean Boeotian here, because the legend tells that of all the Boeotians the Thebans only did not go to Troy, being hard pressed by the Argives. So the Thebans could not claim any of the captives; cp. 993, where Argos is used for the whole Peloponnesus.

250. Λακεδαιμονία, 'Clytaemnestra.' This form is rare in tragedy: ἡ Λάκαινα is the name given usually to Helen, but here to her sister Clytaemnestra. The metre too shows a probable corruption. The verse, which probably consisted of three dochmiacs, may have run, as Dind. suggests, thus: τί φῆς; ἡ Λακαίνα νύμφα δούλαν; ἰώ, ἰώ μοι μοι.

251. σκότια. See 44 supr.

257. κλάδας, 'suppliant boughs,' a heteroclitite accusative plural of κλάδος found in a fragment of Nicander, quoted in Athenaeus 684 B. Other heteroclitite forms from the same subst. are κλαδί in the celebrated scholion in honour of Harmodius and Aristogiton, ἐν μύρτον κλαδί τὸ ξίφος φορήσω: also κλάδα in Poet. ap. Drae. 103. 13, and κλάδεσι in Ar. Ar. 239. The word is restored here with great probability by Mr. Stanley, who justly objects, as against κλήδας of the mss. and Vulg. (C. R. x. l. 35), "If κλήδες means keys, what keys are meant? Were they those of an όπισθόδομος of a temple of Apollo? If so, is it probable that the captive Cassandra had been allowed to retain them until now?" It was a sense of this difficulty which induced some edd. (among them myself) to catch at a gloss from Hesych., κληῖδες· παρὰ Ἐφεσίοις τῆς θεοῦ τὰ στέμματα, and to ascribe to the word the meaning of 'chaplets,' though no other example of such a meaning is found, and it does not in itself seem capable of such. Besides, is it not quite possible that the lemma in Hesych. is corrupt, and that Mr. Stanley's medela should be applied there too? We should expect here the Doric form κλαῖδας, as we have τλάμονα in 247, τῆ νύμφα δούλαν 250, ἐτεκόμαν 265. No doubt κλάδας was first changed to κλαῖδας, then to κληῖδας. "It is to be noticed," adds Mr. Stanley, "that Cassandra is represented σὺν κλάδοις-ἐγχειριδίοις and wearing a wreath on her head in Pittura d'Ercolano, ii. 18." The short anacrusis is quite regular; cp. 266, 271.

στεφέων, 'the holy livery of chaplets that deck thee.' From Ag. 1236 it would appear that these στέφη were worn on the neck as well as the head; ἐνδ. refers to ornamental, not necessary apparel.

264. προσπολεῖν, 'to minister to.' This is a euphemistic and ambiguous term, and is misunderstood by Hec.; hence her question, 'What is this ordinance of the Hellenes?' We learn from verse 40 that Hec. had not heard of the sacrifice of Polyxena on the tomb of Achilles.

271. χαλκεομήστορος, 'well versed in arms,' as it is usually understood. The ms. reading is χαλκεομίτορος (which cannot be right, as the word must form two dactyls, but the ι as coming from μίτος, 'a thread,' is short), or χαλκεομήτορος, which latter has been corrected to χαλκεομήστορος from a gloss of Hesych., χαλκεομίστωρ ἰσχυρόφορος, for which we should doubtless read χαλκεομήστορος· ἰσχυρόφρονος. It will be seen then that Hesych. understood the word to mean 'with heart of steel,' but the analogy of δορμήστωρ, And. 1016, is in favour of 'well versed in arms.'

275. τριτοβάμονος. 'I who need in my hand a staff, as the fellow of my feet,' (lit. 'the third walker with my two feet'), because I am stricken in years,' lit. 'for (the support of) my aged head.'

285. ὃς πάντα τάκειθεν. The construction is ὃς πάντα τάκειθεν ἐνθάδε τιθέμενος, (τὰνθάδε) αἰθις ἐκεῖσε ἀντίπαλα, διπτήχῳ γλώσῃ, τὰ πρότερα φίλα πάντων ἄφιλα (τιθέμενος), 'who putting that which was there here, and again (that which was here) there in its turn (i.e. to balance the former bouleversement) by his subtilty of tongue, and (putting) ever enmity where love was—wait for me, dames of Troy.'

The sentence must be supposed to end in an aposiopesis; there is no principal verb; and aposiopesis would be suitable to the excited and impassioned utterance of Hecuba, who in almost incoherent language wails forth her dread and hatred of her future master. Accepting Bothe's needless conjecture of ἔσεισε for ἐκέϊσε, we should gain a principal verb, thus avoiding the aposiopesis, and we might explain very much as above, 'who dashed (violently put) all that was there here, and again conversely,' (i.e. put what was here there). Bothe's own interpretation of the passage is plainly unsatisfactory. Ἀντίπαλα is used as in Bacch. 275 ff., when Ceres is said to have provided food, while Dionysus devoted himself to the corresponding, correlative necessity of man, that is, drink; so here 'putting what is here there' is the converse, correlative process to 'putting what is there here.' Of course ἀφιλα is the predicate, and the article goes with the subject, τὰ πρότερα φίλα πάντων, lit. 'the former friendly feelings of all.'

“ Alas and alas ! now smite on thy close-shorn head ;
 Now with thy rending nails be thy cheeks furrowed red :
 Woe's me, whom the doom of the lots hath led
 To be thrall to a foul wretch treacherous-hearted,
 To the lawless monster, the foe of the right,
 Whose double-tongued juggling, whose cursed sleight
 Putteth light for darkness, and darkness for light,
 By whose whisperings veriest friends are parted !—
 Wail for me, daughters of Troy ! I am ended
     In utter calamity.
 O wretch, who by doom of the lot have descended
     To abysses of misery !”—W.

294. ἔχει, 'holds in his hand,' not 'knows.' There is sometimes held to be a double interrogation in passages like this, ἄρα being pleonastic after τίς, as in τίνος ποτ' ἄρ' ἔπραξε χειρὶ δύσμορος, Soph. Aj. 905; the double interrogation, it is said, makes the question a little less definite and direct; e.g. in Aj. 905, the question asked is, 'Did he seek the hand of some one to do the deed, and then, whose?' So in the present passage, 'Are we allotted, and, if so, to whom?' For other examples, see L. and S. under ἄρα 4. It is, however, far more probable that ἄρα may be written ἄρα when the metre requires the first syllable to be long, just as ἰμῖν, ἡμῖν in Soph. for metrical purposes became ἰμῖν, ἡμῖν, and as the enclitic νν is long or short as the metre requires in tragedy. There are many places where nothing but violent alteration of the text can dispense with ἄρα used in the same sense as ἄρα, and if this once be granted, it is unscientific to put forward the theory of a double interrogation; we should rather hold ἄρα in passages like this to be simply ἄρα, a particle of inference or transition. A good instance of a passage where ἄρα = ἄρα is Ar. Nub. 1301, ἔμελλον σ' ἄρα κινήσειν, where the sense would require ἄρ' οὐ, ποῦνε, instead of ἄρα, an, if the passage were treated as interrogative.

297. εἰληγμένας, from λαγχάνω.

300. πιμπράσιν, cp. σπεύρουσιν ἢ τῷ ζῶσι Δημητρος στάχυν, Cycl. 121. For examples of hyperbaton, see on Bacch. 860.

305. τὸ ταῖσδε πρόσφορον, sc. θανεῖν: the word πρόσφορον conveys not only that it would be 'expedient,' but also that it would be 'decorous' for the Trojan dames to die rather than go into captivity, but this would be most 'untoward' for the Achaeans.'

308. The frenzied maiden fancies she is in Apollo's temple which she lights up by wildly waving her nuptial torch, while Apollo himself leads the choir. Subjoined is the spirited and most felicitous translation of this ode, which appeared in Kottabos, vol. I., p. 54, by Judge Webb, formerly Fellow of Trinity College, Dublin, afterwards Regius Professor of Laws, translator of Faust, etc.:

"Lift ye and lend ye—bring ye light!

'Tis a holy rite! Behold, behold!

Through the fane with a thousand torches bright

How the eddies of fire are roll'd!

Hail Hymen! Hail, King Hymenaeus!

Full blest is the bridegroom, and I too am blest.

That am soon on the couch of a monarch to rest.

O Hymen, O King Hymenaeus!

While thou, O my Mother, with wail and with tear,

Dost lament o'er my Father and Fatherland's bier,

For my bridal, behold, I am raising

The torch that so fiercely is blazing!

It glanceth, it gleameth, ah! see,

Hymen, O Hymenaeus, for thee!

Lend, lend me thy torches, O Hekat,

For the couch of the virgin, to deck it!

Airily poise ye the twinkling feet!

On with the dance! Ho! Eueo! ho!

On with the dance, as 'twere to greet

The happiest lot that my sire could know

The dance it is sacred to Hymen!

The dance, be its leader, O Phoebus, thou!

In whose fane, 'mid the laurels, I worship now

Hymen! Hymenaeus! O Hymen!

Come trip it, my Mother, come trip it with me,
 And share in the dancing, and share in the glee !
 As it were for the battle a Paeon,
 Shout, shout ye the great Hymenaeon !
 Pour forth with your voices a tide
 Of melodious song for the bride,
 Sing, ye maids, for the maid that is fated
 With the king of the foe to be mated !”

309. ἀνεχε, πάρεχε. These words are addressed to the fancied acolytes officiating in the temple.

315. ἐπέε. It was the duty of the mother εὐνάς ἀγῆλαι λαμπάδας τ’ ἀνασχεθεῖν.

ἐπέε, ‘with tears,’ a rare use of ἐπί with dative; cp. ἐπί συννοία, Or. 632, though that may be explained ‘for the purpose of (to gain time for) reflection.’ We have ἐπί δάκρυσι again, Hel. 176, Phoen. 1500; cp. also Phoen. 786, ἐπί καλλιχόροις στεφάνοισι. In Med. 928, we have ἐπί δακρύοις in a different sense, ‘made for tears,’ with which compare ἔρωσ γὰρ ἀργὸν κάπι τοῖς ἀργοῖς ἔφυ, ‘made for the idle,’ Frags. 324. Mr. Stanley well observes that the harshness of ἐπί δάκρυσι is mitigated by the fact that it seems to be opposed to ἐπί γάμοις in 319.

317. καταστένουσ’ ἔχεις, ‘keepest wailing for’; cp. ληρεῖς ἔχων, ‘keepest prating.’ This connection of ἔχω with the part. is common with the aorist, more rare with the perfect (Soph. l. R. 701, Phil. 600), and very rare with the present as here. See on 1122.

324. ἃ νόμος ἔχει, ‘as the ritual ordains.’ ἃ, acc. plur., is in apposition to the preceding sentences. She calls for all the observances due to the solemnization of a regular union.

325. πάλλε, ‘airily poise the foot’; cp. ἴνζε δ’ ὀμφάν οὐρανίαν, Aesch. Suppl. 788, and ῥίπτειν σκέλος οὐράνιον, Ar. Vesp. 1492. We find ἔρρε αἰθέριον ... φάρος in And. 830, and οὐράνια βρέμοντα below 520.

332. ἀναγέλασον. This is the reading of V, which quite corresponds to the antistrophic verse 315, if we there omit καὶ after δάκρυσι, a conjunction which would far more probably have been inserted than omitted erroneously between two substantives. P has ἀναγε πόδα σόν, which looks as if it had been vamped up from v. 325. The reading of P is defended by Mr. A. C. Pearson, in C. R. iv. 9, p. 425, on the theory that V dropped the syllable πο-, and then confounded Δ with the closely-resembling Λ. V drops a syllable -κο- in giving ἐξαντίζω or ἐξανθίζω in v. 444, where the trochaic metre demands ἐξακοντιζω.

335. βοάτε τὸν Ὑμ. This phrase is treated as a single transitive verb, and governs νύμφαν on the principle explained and illustrated above on 59.

339. γάμων ... εὐνά. Cp. Phoen. 58, τὰ μὰ λέκτρα μητρῶν γάμων.

345. ἔξω, 'far from what my high hopes pictured'; cp. ἔξω γνάμης, Ion 926; ἔξω τοῦ φυτεῖσαντος, Soph. Phil. 904, 'alien to your father's strain'; ἔξω νομίσεως, Thuc. v. 105.

348. ὀρθά. For adjs. in neut. plur. used as adverbs, cp. Hcl. 283 (see note on 239), and ἄλεκτρα γηράσκουσαν ἀνιμέναία τε, Soph. El. 962, and see Madv. Greek Syntax, § 88.

351. ἐσφέρετε, usually explained 'take away' (into the tent); but ἐσφέρειν always means to 'bring in,' not to 'take in': in other words Hec. could properly say ἐσφέρετε πείκας, 'bring in the torches,' only if she were herself in the tent. I think we should read ἐκφέρετε, 'take away'; ἐκ- would be easily changed to εἰσ-: it is well known that the ancient copyists often confounded IC with K, see crit. note on Bacch. 1156.

353. νικηφόρον, used proleptically; see above on 227.

355. τὰ μὰ = τὰ ἐμά, 'my part,' a common periphrase for ἐγώ. So τὸ σὸν and τὰ σὰ for σὺ or σέ.

356. ἔστι. Observe the accent, 'as sure as Loxias lives.'

357. γαμεί με ... γάμων. For the cognate accus. see Madv. Greek Syntax, § 26 a: and for the cognate accus. standing, as here, beside a proper object-accus. see ibid. § 26 b; and note, as an exact parallel, Pl. Apol. 39, τιμωρία . χαλεπωτέρα ἢ οἶαν ἐμὲ ἀπεκτόνατε.

361. πέλεκυν. There is here probably a covert criticism on the bloody details of Aeschylus in his Orestia. In his later plays we find in Eur. a tendency to introduce in some slight measure that literary criticism which formed a feature in the middle comedy. This characteristic is especially observable in his Electra, inasmuch that M. Patin describes the play as a feuilleton spirituel. In 254 ff. he adverts to many points in the handling of the story of Electra, in which he believes his illustrious predecessors, Aesch. and Soph., to have erred. So also in Suppl. 846, Phoen. 751, there are pointed allusions to supposed artistic defects in Aesch. Theb.

370. ἐχθίστων, sc. Ἑλένης.

371. ἡδονάς, 'resigning for his brother the home joys that his children might have given him': ἡδονάς is sometimes used very objectively, as in Soph. El. 873, Ar. Nub. 1072.

373. λελησμένης. This is distinctly passive, and therefore implies λήσω, but λήσομαι is the much more usual form, as in ελήσατο, 866 below. In Hel. 475 we have λελήσμεθα ... λέχος, 'I have had my wife carried off.' Obs. epic form ἤλυθον in 374.

375. ἔθνησκον, 'fell' (day after day); the imperfect represents the continuance (or repetition) of the same action or state, while the aorist denotes a momentary occurrence; ἔθνη, ἔθνη, ἔθνη is in Greek ἤλυθον, εἶδον, ἐνίκησα, because, though the action was of course a continued action, yet the point of the despatch was that it viewed the victory as a momentary event in past time. See Goodwin, § 19, notes 1 and 2.

376. ἔλοι. Opt. because the relative refers to an indefinite antecedent, 'whomsoever the battle chanced to slay'; οὓς Ἀρης εἶλε would be used if the antecedents were definite; so in Lat. quoscumque occidisset and quoscumque occiderat.

377. ἐν χεροῖν, 'by the hands'; so ἐν λιταῖς, 'by prayers'; ἐν δόλῳ, 'by deceit'; ἐν λόγοις, 'by words.'

378. ξυνεστάλησαν, 'were shrouded in their cerements.'

380. οἱ δ', 'others,' that is, the fathers, who were too old to join the expedition, but who were obliged to send their sons. 'Wife without mate, sire without seed, they died away; vain was their rearing of children, and none shall seek their tombs with a propitiatory blood-offering.' See El. 90 ff. αἱ μὲν must be supplied before χῆραι, being implied in the subsequent οἱ δέ. The verse would be thus written accurately καὶ αἱ μὲν χῆραι ἔθνησκον, οἱ δ' ἄπαιδες: from this it appears that χῆραι is not the subject, but a predicate, not 'widows died,' but 'they died widows.'

382. δωρήσεται, 'shall give to the earth,' i.e. 'shall pour out upon the earth'; the 'blood-offering' was an offering to propitiate the departed heroes; we cannot interpret 'shall offer blood-offerings to mother earth,' for we find from the enumeration in Aesch. Pers. 612 ff. that blood was not a part of the offering to earth; and again, Cho. 120 ff. tells us that the offerings to earth consisted only of her own produce restored to her again. For the blood-offerings to dead heroes, see the eleventh book of the Odyssey.

384. τάσχροά. The murder of Agamemnon and adultery of Clytaemnestra and Aegisthus. There should be no iota subscript in τάσχροά, the rule being that the iota is subscribed only when both words fused by the crasis contain an ι; thus καὶ εἶτα becomes κᾶτα, but καὶ ἐπὶ becomes κᾶπί, τὰ αἰσχρά becomes τάσχροά.

385. αἰδός, adjective, cp. Hcl. 1109, ὄρνις αἰδοπάτα: so κερκίδος αἰδοῦ μέλετας, Frag. 527, an expression ridiculed by Ar. Ran. 1315.

386. τὸ κάλλιστον κλέος. This is probably the accusative, for the accusative in apposition to the sentence is the more idiomatic construction; it may, however, of course be the nominative, like θριγκός, 489.

389. περιβολάς, 'in their fatherland came unto the vesture of clay,' cp. χθονὸς τρίμοιρον χλαῖναν, Agam. 872; γὰν ἐπιεσσόμενος, Pind. Nem. xi. 21.

390. ὧν ἐχρῆν ὕπο, 'hands which owed this office to the dead' = ὑπὸ τούτων ὑφ' ὧν ἐχρῆν. The words ἐχρῆν, οὐκ ἐχρῆν, are much used in Greek when we should employ a far stronger expression; for instance, 'having committed a most unnatural murder,' would be δν οὐκ ἐχρῆν φονεύσας.

392. δάμαρτι. For sing. instead of plur. see on Bacch. 724.

393. ὧν ... ἤδομαι. 'the sweets of whom were lost to the Greeks,' see on 372, literally, 'the joys from whom for the Achaeans (i.e. which might have been felt by the Achaeans) were wanting.' It is safer not to take Ἀχαιοῖς as directly governed by ἀπῆσαν, which ought to take the gen., and indeed does always take it, for the places in which it appears to take the dat. may be otherwise construed; e.g. in Med. 179, μήτοι τό γ' ἐμὸν πρόθυμον | φίλοιςιν ἀπέστω, we may take φίλοιςιν with πρόθυμον, 'my zeal for my friends,' and in Thuc. ii. 61, τῆς δὲ ὠφελίας ἀπεστιν ἔτι ἡ δῆλωσις ἅπασι, the dat. is a dat. commodi, as in the foregoing clause, τὸ μὲν λυποῦν ἔχει ἤδη τὴν αἰσθησιν ἐκάστῳ, 'an individual sense of the bitterness of war possesses each one, while the general sense of its advisability has yet to come.'

394. τὰ Ἑκτορος λυπρά, 'Hector's sad fate' (as it is generally regarded); she then proceeds to show that it is not a sad fate. τὰ δ' Ἑκτορός σοι λυπρά is, as it were, in inverted commas. Such seems to be occasionally the force of the article; in other words, it marks a citation or quotation from the language of others, and this explains why (contrary to the usual rule) we sometimes find the article with the predicate, e.g. Her. Fur. 581, οὐκ ἄρ' Ἡρακλῆς | ὁ καλ-λίνικος ... λέξομαι: cp. Heracl. 978, Or. 1140. Iph. Aut. 1354.

396. ἔξις = ἤξις, 'the coming of the Greeks.' The form in the text has the authority of Hesych.

397. P and Christus Patiens have ἐλάβανεν, and in 399 εἶχεν. But the imperf. without ἂν in apodosis cannot be defended here, and is not parallel to the cases cited in Goodwin, § 49, 2, note 2, or in Madv. Greek Syntax, § 118, a, b. Elmsley's observation, that the Attic writers avoided eliding ε of the 3rd pers., really only applies to cases where confusion between 1st and 3rd pers. might arise, as in ἐπραξ' ἄν. See the excellent note of Prof. Jebb, who reads ἐλάνθαν' ἄν in Soph. El. 914. In Ion 354 the MSS. give εἶχ' ἄν, and no change there is at all plausible.

399. κῆδος, 'he would have entered into some obscure alliance,' 'the marriage made by him would never have been talked about.' It is to be observed that there is far more MSS. authority for κῶδος, which the schol. understood in a neutral sense like κλέος, 'his name would never have been in men's mouths.' But κῶδος is a positive word in all Greek, and ἐν δόμοις seems distinctly to point to κῆδος. σιγώμενον is the predicate of the sentence.

408. ἔξεβάκχευσεν governs σε, and then φρένας as part of the person addressed; see on 59.

410. ἔξέπεμπες ἄν, 'should'st have been attending their departure with such ill-boding words.'

412. τῶν τὸ μηδέν, sc. ὄντων. There are three forms of this phrase, ὁ μηδεῖς, ὁ μηδέν (ών), and ὁ τὸ μηδέν (ών): cp. οὐδέν ἦτ' ἄρα, 1161. μηδέν and οὐδέν are in this usage indeclinable. There is a pretty phrase in Eur. Frag. 536, which illustrates well the distinction between μηδεῖς as subjective and οὐδεῖς as objective; the phrase is τὸ μηδέν εἰς οὐδέν ῥέπει, which I would render 'naughtiness (or 'that which is naught') cometh to nought.'

415. ὑπέστη, 'is saddled with a passion for,' cp. ὑποστῆναι πόνον, Suppl. 189; the verb means 'to undergo unwillingly.'

416. ἄν οὐκ. For the displacement of ἄν in obedience to the metre, cp. οὐκ οἶδ' ἄν εἰ πείσαιμι, Med. 941. See Goodwin, § 42, 2, note.

418. Ἀργεῖα, 'invectives against the Greeks'; cp. εἰνολία τῇ σῆ, 'friendliness for you,' Pl. Gorg. 486; φόβω τῷ ἡμετέρῳ, 'fear of you,' Thuc. i. 33. For adjectives used, as here, to represent not a subjective, but an objective, genitive, cp. Ἑλλην ... φόνος, Irh. T. 72; ἀλκὴν ... Μυκηνίδα, Phoen. 862.

422. ἔπεσθαι, for imper.; see Goodwin, § 101.

σώφρονος, i.e. Penelope.

424. τοῦνομα, 'the name which they bear,' 'Why do they bear this name when they are really but menials?'

428. ποῦ δέ: cp. τί δ' ἔστι, 1050; the more usual phrase would have been καὶ ποῦ, for καὶ is especially employed in introducing an objection. It is frequently strengthened with εἶτα, ἔπειτα, e.g. below 1010.

430. τᾶλλα, 'the rest of her woes,' especially referring to the transformation of Hecuba; or possibly the meaning is, 'the rest of my words shall not be Ἀργεῖ' ὀνειδῆ, but prophecies of the sufferings of Odysseus, the future master of Hecuba.'

432. χρυσός, 'one day my woes and Troy's will be to him more to be desired than gold,' ('will be as gold'). See L. and S. under χρυσός 2.

435. ὤκιστα, 'has made herself a habitation in the strait' (between Italy and Sicily). Charybdis was the fabled daughter of Poseidon and Gaea. Cic. Phil. ii. 27 says, "Charybdis dico quae si fuit, fuit animal unum." Cp. πύργον οἰκιοῦμεθα, Heracl. 46. Some verses are supposed to have fallen out here, on account of the extreme abruptness of 435. Paley remarks that this is the earliest summary of the story of Odysseus; Ar. Vesp. 180 ff. refers to the episode of Ὀδύσεως. The whole passage, 435-443, has the appearance of an interpolation, and I have marked it as such; 440 looks like an Alexandrine attempt at vigour, and the following verse is strangely frigid. Mr. A. C. Pearson, in C. R. iv. 9. 425, points out additional reasons for regarding this passage as spurious: (1) the feebleness of the whole passage, and especially of ὡς δὲ συντέμω in 441; (2) οὐ has no meaning unless we mark a lacuna; (3) διάνυλος does not mean 'a strait'; (4) πέτρας is without construction; (5) ἐπιστάτης, which Dind. reads for ὄρειβάτης on the faith of Stephens' codices, does not mean 'a shepherd'; (6) μορφώτρια σέων is a very eccentric expression; (7) σάρκα φων. ἦσ. is impossible; (8) κακὰ μυρία is miserably weak. Cp. a similar interpolation in Or. 588-590.

436. ὠμοβρώς τ' ὄρειβάτης. I have retained the reading of P and the Aldine (which give ὠμοβροστορειβάτης), with Scaliger's obvious correction. Dind. gives ὠμόφρων τ' ἐπιστάτης ('shepherd'), which rests on the questionable authority of Stephens' codices. The words in the text are a much better description of the Cyclops; ὠμοβρώς is found in H. F. 887.

440. σάρκα φων. ἦσουσιν. The legend was that when the sacred kine of the sun were roasted by the followers of Odysseus, 'the meat lowed on the spits,' μ. 395. But the expression in the text is, I think, not by Eur., and savours far more of Lycophron: ιέναι σάρκα φωνήσσαν could not mean λέναι φωνήν ἐκ σαρκός. The words are probably not corrupt. Alexandrine boldness generally degenerates into unintelligibility. I cannot believe in the possibility of such an expression as σάρκα φων. ἤσουσι, especially as it occurs in a passage highly suspicious for other reasons. [I am inclined to defend this expression, remarkable though it is. Consider the boldness of what Jelf calls the interchange of attributive forms, e.g. 564, καράτομος ἐρημία νεανιῶν, which Kühner, p. 225, renders, 'die vom Haupte abgeschnittene Oede der Jünglinge, das ist, Todesöde.' Cp. Soph. Oed. R. 1376, Aj. 8, Phil. 952, 1123, 1131, El. 158. Here either of two analyses will reduce the expression to tolerable exactitude: (a) ἤσουσι should strictly have φωνήν as its object, which then might be qualified by τὴν ἐκ σαρκός or the like. But we have the adjective and substantive reversed, so that what ought strictly to be the logical object of the verb is to be looked for in the adjective. Usually, however, in the cases cited by the grammars, it is the transference of an attributive from one noun to another which forms the peculiarity, like Barry Cornwall's "Hear the waters their white music weave" for 'Hear the white waters weave their music.' Sometimes again, instead of two nouns of distinct reference, we have an adjective and a noun, which is the account of Carlyle's expression (Rem. E. Irving) "the hot noises of middle life" = 'the heat and noises.' Neither of these groups of cases offers an exact parallel to σάρκα φων. ἤσουσι, but they may throw some light on the process by which such expressions arise. (b) the other 'reduction' would be to substitute (mentally) some such word as δύσονται for ἤσουσι, 'shall clothe themselves with vocal flesh.' It might be said that ἤσουσι is written by a sort of attraction of the expression to the neighbouring word, φωνήσουσι. Wolff, on Ajax 738 (Teubner's Schulausgabe), recognizes this principle, saying there, "βραδείαν ist wegen des folgenden βραδὺς gewählt, um bei Gleichheit der Sache die Personen entgegen zu stellen," and again, on Aj. 758, he says σώματα is the word chosen, on account of the following πίπτειν. This principle helps, to my mind, to explain ἔπος in Or. 1; a proseur might have said, οὐδέν ἐστι δεινόν, ᾧδ' εἰπεῖν, χρῆμα, but to the poet εἰπεῖν suggested ἔπος.—H. C.]

445. στεῖχε ... γημώμεθα, 'go (to Talthybius), that straight-way I may marry me into the house of Death'; the expression is the same as ἐς τύρανν' ἐγημάμην, 474, 'I married into a royal line'; though it is slightly complicated by the addition of νυμφίω. For such pregnant constructions, cp. Or. 474, πρὸς δεξιὰν στάς, and ih. 1330; Aj. 80, ἐς δόμους μένειν: Phoen. 380, 1150, and especially 588 d below. Observe that ὅπως is in relation with γημώμεθα, not with τάχιστα, with which it would naturally be taken in the sense of quam primum.

450. δάσασθαι, fr. δατέομαι, cp. δώσειν κνσίν ὠμὰ δάσασθαι, Ψ. 21.

453. σπαραγμοῖς, 'as I tear you off': she tears off her sacred symbols, as in Agam. 1235 ff. The words ἔτ' οὖσ' ἀγνή mean virum nondum experta.

455. ποῦ σκάφος, Cic. Err. ad Att. vii. 35, quotes these words in the form ποῦ σκάφος τὸ τῶν Ἀτρειδῶν. ποῖ = ἐς ποτέραν ναῦν.

457. Ἐρινῶν = Ἐρινύων, gen. plur. Ἐρινύν, which is sometimes read, would be accus. sing.

460. οὐ μακράν, 'brevi'; cp. Or. 858, ἔοικε δ' οὐ μακράν ὄδ' ἄγγελος λέξειν τὰ κείθεν, more usually οὐκ ἐς μακράν.

466. The whole of this very fine passage may be rendered somehow thus:

'O damsels, let me lie where I have fallen ;
 Service unwelcome but disservice seems ;
 To lie so low doth well beseem my lot,
 Present, and past, and that which is to come.
 Ye gods—ye will not minister to me.
 Yet it is seemly to invoke your names
 If any one fall on calamity.
 First let my dying swan-note be of joy,
 Thus shall I put more pity in my woes.
 I was a queen, into a kingly house
 Wed, and the mother of a princely line,
 No ciphers, men of leading in the land,
 No Trojan, Argive, or outlandish dame
 Could boast herself of such a progeny,
 All these I saw fall by the Argive spear,
 To grace their sepulchres these locks I shore.
 And with these eyes I saw their kingly sire,
 I heard it not from others' lips, but saw him
 Weltering in his life-blood at the altar,
 And the town sacked. And all the girls I bore,
 Fit to be jewels in the crown of wifehood,
 I bore for foemen's usance : I am reft
 Of all my damsels : never more, I wis,
 Shall I behold them or be seen of them.'

τὰ μὴ φίλ', 'the undesired service' of helping her to rise from the ground. For the sentiment, cp. "Invitum qui servat idem facit occidenti," Hor. A. P. 467.

472. ἐξᾶσαι. The word is used by Plat. Phaed. 35 of the 'last song' of the dying swan; and Polybius xxxi. 20. 1 has the phrase, ἐξᾶσας τὸ κύκνειον: so it seems nearly certain that here there is an allusion to the last note of the dying swan.

474. ἦμεν τύραννοι. Most edd. read ἦ μὲν τύραννος or ἡμην τύραννος, a form which is also introduced in Hel. 931; this is held by Cobet to be a Macedonian form of the imperfect of εἶμι. The form ἡμην is found in Chr. Pat. 537. There is, however, no reason to change the ms. reading. It is the habit of the Attic writers, when they use plur. for sing., to recur to the sing. as soon as possible, and to use sing. and plur. in close juxtaposition, as in ἦν θάνω θανούμεθα, 904 below. τύραννοι is masc. A woman speaking of herself uses the masc. (1) when she uses the plural, as here; (2) when she speaks generally of her own sex, as El. 775, οὐδὲ γὰρ κακῶς πάσχοντι μῖσος ὧν τέκη προσγίγνεται: (3) when a chorus of women speaks of itself in the sing., the masc. is sometimes used, e.g. Hipp. 1103, λείπομαι ἐν τε τύχαις θνατῶν καὶ ἐν ἔργμασι λεύσσω.

ἐς τύραννα. See on 445.

476. ἀριθμόν, similarly used in Ar. Nub. 1203, Soph. O. C. 381, and of one man in Heracl. 997. [To what is the adverb attached? Does it qualify the noun? If so, cp. Dem. Cor. 245. 62, ἐν τοιαύτῃ καταστάσει καὶ ἔτι ἀγνοία τοῦ ... κακοῦ: Thuc. vii. 34, τὴν οὐκέτι ... ἐπαναγωγὴν. In that case, however, the article is present, and they are both time-adverbs; but see Thuc. ii. 4. 3, ἦν ἀντικρυς δίοδος: Krüger quotes Dem. 19. 141, γέγονε τῶν ἐχθρῶν ἄρδην ὄλεθρος.—H. C.].

477, 478. These verses are most probably spurious; as they stand they have no meaning; Stephens conjectured οὔς for οὐ before Τρῳάς, and I have translated that reading; the sentence would then be like Ar. Av. 659, γῆ δ' οὐδ' ἀήρ οὐδ' οὐρανὸς ἦν: Dind. says οἴους, not οὔς, would be required. See, however, 499, where ὧν seems to be quite synonymous with οἶων.

485. εἰς ... ἐξαίρετον, lit. 'for the choice dignity of husbands,' for espousals however distinguished.

486. ἄλλοισι. In 381 the mss. give us ἄλλοις, but there ἄλλοις must be changed to ἄλλως.

489. τὸ λοίσθιον, used as adverb. θριγκὸς is nom. in apposition to the sentence.

495. ἐκ, 'after,' cp. κάλλιστον ἡμᾶρ εἰσιδεῖν ἐκ χερίματος, Aesch. Agam. 873; ἐξ ὀλβίων ἀζηλον εὐροῦσαι βιον, Soph. Trach. 284.

497. ἀδόκιμ' ὀλβίοις ἔχειν, 'unseemly for the prosperous to wear.' Her garments would betray how completely her former ὀλβος had fled; ὀλβος is here used in its Homeric sense of 'material prosperity.'

498. μιᾶς γυναικός, sc. Helen; γάμων (γάμον P) μιᾶς ἓνα is the ms. reading. Dind. reads διὰ γάμω μιᾶς δύο, but μιᾶς ἓνα is surely right; this pleonasm is much sought after by the tragics; cp. Or. 613, Soph. El. 617, Aj. 20, Ant. 443, 492. See also 776 below.

499. οἶων ... ὦν: the rel. ὦν is here used as synonymous with οἶων, as in 477, if Stephens' conjecture there is right. See Jebb on Soph. Aj. 125, who quotes Eur. Alc. 640, εἶδεξας εἰς ἔλεγχον ἐξελθῶν ὃς εἶ. Of course ὦν τεύξομαι could not possibly by itself mean, 'what I shall have to meet!'; the relative could not be exclamatory; but here it attracts to itself the interjectional quality of οἶων, which immediately precedes.

506. δῆποτ', 'that once went delicately in Troy.'

507. στυβάδα ... ἀποφθαρῶ, 'take me away to some lowly lair, to some precipice's crest, so that I may weep my heart away, and then cast me down and perish.' She longs for a lonely place where to weep and then slay herself. The commentators, puzzled by an apparent inconsistency in the aspirations of the 'mobled queen,' have made various conjectures, e.g. χαμαιριφῆ (a word found in Chr. Pat. 1430) for χαμαιπετῆ (Nauck); and for δακρύοις, ἄκραις or πέτροις (Musgrave), ὄκρισι (Hartung); but the text is quite sound: it is a fine touch of psychological analysis to make the queen long to weep her fill before she slays herself. There is, no doubt, an allusion to the death of Niobe.

511. ἀμφί μοι, 'lift, Muse, for me the lay of Troy.' This is the traditional epic exordium of a hymn, e.g. ἀμφί μοι Ἑρμείω φίλον γόνον ἔννεπε, Μοῦσα, is the first verse of the Homeric hymn to Pan; so ἀμφί Ποσειδάωνα, ἀμφί Διώνυσον, ἀμφί Διὸς κούρους: so also ἀμφί μοι αἰ σέ, Φοῖβ' ἄναξ, Ar. Nub. 595; hence ἀμφιανακτίζειν is 'to write dithyrambic hymns,' like that of Terpander, which began ἀμφί μοι αἶτε ἄναχθ' ἑκαταβόλον ἀειδέτω φρήν: hence, too, dithyrambic poets were called ἀμφιάνакτες.

512. ὕμνων ᾠδάν. Cp. θρήνων ... ᾠδás, Soph. El. 88; δακρῶν ... μέλος, Eur. Hipp. 1178; μέλος ... τύχης, Iph. Aut. 1280.

513. ἐν. See L. and S., ἐν, II. 1, 2.

516. τετραβάμονος ἀπήνας, 'the horse that conveyed him,' that is, the ecus durateus, 'wooden horse': ἀπήνη is simply a 'vehicle,' as in Med. 1123, ναῖαν ἀπήνην: the adj. τετρα-

βάμονος tells the nature of the vehicle, i.e. that it was a horse; τετρ. is 'a horse,' like quadrupes in Latin, and qualifies χηλαί, ψάλια in Phoen. 792, 808. The horse was moved on wheels; cp. Virg. Aen. ii. 235, "pedibusque rotarum | subiciunt lapsus"; and Q. Smyrn. xii. 424, ἐσθλὸς Ἐπειὸς | ποσσὶν ὑπὸ βριαροῖσιν ἐτύροχα δούρατ' ἔθηκεν.

520. βρέμοντα, 'rattling loudly,' 'ringing with the clash of arms within it.' βρέμειν is applied to the sound of the λωτοί in Bacch. 161, and to the clash of arms in Heracl. 832. For ούράνια, see on 325, 1301. Cp. Virg. Aen. ii. 243, "atque utero sonitum quater arma dedere."

521. ξνοπλον, 'equum fetum armis'; so ἐνθεος is 'inspired,' ἐνθηρος is 'infested with wild beasts,' and ἐγκαρπος is 'fruity.'

522. ἀπό, 'standing on the rock and crying out from it,' cp. Phoen. 1223, Soph. El. 137, where τὸν γ' ἐξ Ἄϊδα ἀστάσεις = τὸν ἐν ἄδου ἐξ ἄδου ἀναστήσεις: so Soph. καθήμεθ' ἄκρων ἐκ πάγων, Ant. 411; and τῶν παρὰ βασιλέως, Xen. An. i. 1; τοὺς ἐκείθεν ἐπιβοηθεῖν, Thuc. i. 62; Eur. Hel. 1591, Phoen. 1223, Thuc. iii. 21, Ξ. 153, φ. 420.

526. Ἰλιάδι, κόρα, sc. Pallas.

530. See note on 550.

531. γέννα, this word is followed by δώσων, which agrees with λαός implied in γέννα, a construction πρὸς τὸ σημαινόμενον.

534. ξεστόν λόχον, 'the Argives ambushed in the cunningly wrought mountain pine, Troy's doom.' ξεστόν refers in grammar to λόχον, but in sense to πύκα: for though λόχος might, and often does, indicate the 'place of ambush,' yet the words πύκα ἐν οὐρεῖα here force us to take λόχον as referring to the 'men that form the ambush,' and so, of course, ξεστόν cannot be literally predicated of it. This application of an adj. to a subst., to which in sense it only mediately refers, is a frequent device whereby the Greek poets achieve dignity of language, and avoid a commonplace style. It is a marked feature in the style of Pindar. It is called by Jelf "the interchange of attributive forms." But 'the smooth-planed ambush' for 'men ambushed in a horse of smooth-planed wood' is certainly a too daring use of this figure. Hdt. iii. 8 has ξύλων λόχον. I have slightly changed the form of both the strophic and antistrophic verse in the interests of the metre. The ms. reading is ἕισον ἐν δακρύοις and πύκα ἐν οὐρεῖα. The metrical form is now — — — — —. A spondee may correspond to a trochee in this form of verse. For the prodelision cp. σθένει ἴνικελω, Soph. O. C. 1086. Dr. Heinsch would read πευκᾶν οὐρεῖαν, comparing Q. Smyrn. xii. 124, οἱ δ' ἐλάττησιν ἐπιβρίσαντες ἀν' ὕλην | τάμνον δένδρεα μακρά.

535. For θεᾶ B and C give θέα, and the schol. has καὶ ὁ Πρίαμος ἐξῆλλθε τὴν βλάβην θεασόμενος. But θέα δώσων = θεασόμενος is impossible, and is not defended by the usage of θέα διδόντες in Andr. 1087; of πόνοις διδοῦσα, Or. 1663; or of φιλήμασιν ἔδωκε, inf. 1176. Weil (Revue de Philologie, Nouv. Sér. i., Paris 1877, p. 195) infers from the schol. that Priam must have been mentioned, and suggests ἂν Δαρδανίδας ἄταν θεᾶ δώσων.

He urges that δώσοντες would have been used, not δώσων, if the part. agreed, according to the constr. πρὸς τὸ σημαίνόμενον, with γέννα. He thinks that the schol. thought Δαρδανίδας meant 'Priam,' but he himself refers it to 'the people of Troy,' comparing Ἐρεχθεΐδης, Κεκροπίδης, Αἰγείδης for 'the Athenians' in Aristophanes, Knights.

536. χάριν, 'as an acceptable oblation to the virgin with coursers of immortal strain,' i.e. Παλλὰς Ἰππία: others take ἀμβροτόπωλος as meaning simply 'virgin goddess,' πῶλος being virgo, and the word being formed on the analogy of ὀρθόμαντις = ὀρθὸς μάντις: so ἀριστόμαντιν, αἰνολέοντα, αἰνογιγάντων, αἰνόπαρις, αἰνοπάτηρ, αἰνοτύραννος. Cp. "Pars stupet inuirtiae donum exitiale Minervae," Virg. Aen. ii. 31. But Herm. interprets quite differently. Instead of taking χάριν in apposition to the sentence, he takes it in apposition to ξεστὸν λόχον, and renders 'the gift of a divine steed that never felt the yoke.' This seems at first sight to give a more natural meaning to χάριν with gen.; but in defence of the other interpretation we have, e.g. Aesch. Agam. 182, δαιμόνων χάρις = 'homage due to the gods.'

537. κλωστοῦ, 'with encircling hawsers of spun flax'; κλωστοῦ is from κλωστής = κλωστήρ, 'yarn.' Kirch. reads κλωστοῦ ... λίνου, which reading he draws from the note of the schol., καθάπερ ναὸς σκάφος κλωστοῦ λίνου ἀμφιβόλοις, ὃ ἔστι σχοινίοις, οὕτως ἐπὶ τὸν ἵππον ἐπέβαλον. The schol. seems, therefore, to take ἀμφιβόλοις as a subst.: from the same note Matthiae drew ὡσεὶ for ὡς eis of the mss. The allusion might be to the Greek custom of conveying ships over an isthmus by means of ropes and rollers. But Q. Smyrn. xii. 428, compares the drawing in of the wooden horse to the launching of a ship:

ἐλκον ἐπιβρίσαντες ἀολλέες, ἥυτε νῆα
ἐλκωσιν μογέοντες ἔσω ἀλδς ἠχηέσσης αἰζηοί.

As his description and that of Eur. may have been (and probably were) founded on the same now lost cyclic epic, the passage quoted from him affords good reason for our understanding the passage before us as referring to the launching of a ship, not to its conveyance over an isthmus.

539. φόνια, 'they put it in the shrine of the goddess Pallas, on the floor fateful to fatherland.'

541. ἐπὶ ... παρῆν: the verb and preposition are separated by tnesis. [There is probably a reminiscence of the Homeric ἐπὶ κνέφας ἦλθε. Cp. πολύτλας ἀνὴρ, Aj. 958, as an echo of πολύτλας διὸς Ὀδυσσεύς, so ib. 175, βοῦς ἀγελαίας: and perhaps Phoen. 210, ἀκαρπίστων πεδίων Σικελίας (sc. ἀλός), is an echo of ἀλός ἀτρύγετοιο in Homer, as well as κυβιστῆρες, ib. 1131, of ὡς ρεῖα κυβιστῆ, Π. 745.—H. C.]

544. ἀνά. ἀνά is sometimes explained as = ἀνήειρον: but this explanation can by no means be accepted in the absence of examples to justify such a usage; neither can ἀνά mean comitante pedum strepitu, an employment of this preposition which cannot be defended. I believe that ἀνά is separated by tnesis from ἐμελπον: we have ἀναμέλω with acc. of cogn. sign. ἀοιδάν, in Theocr. xvii. 113. I have retained the τ' of the mss. after βοάν, which Dind. strikes out; ἀνέμελπον governs both βοάν and (by a slight zeugma) κρότον, 'plied fealty the rhythmic footfall, fealty the jocund lay.' It must be remembered that μολπή refers, not to singing only, but to 'song and dance,' or any 'rhythmic measured movement,' being applied even to Nausicaa's game at ball (ζ. 100).

550. ἔδωκεν ὕπνω. The metre shows this to be faulty, the antistrophic verse being δόλιον ἔσχον ἄταν. Herm. suggests ἀπεδίωκεν ὕπνω: Reiske, παρ' ἵπνω, 'arid caminum.' Perhaps we should read

πυρὸς μέλαιναν αἴγλαν
πυρὸς ἔδωκεν ὕπνω,

'the lamps alight shed a gloomy glare on the sleepers. Euripides' proneness to iteration of words, especially in choral odes, is a familiar feature in his style, and is often parodied by Aristophanes. Dr. Maguire would read, ἔπορε τοῖς ἐν ὕπνω. The schol. is τὸ σέλας τοῦ πυρὸς τὴν μέλαιναν αἴγλαν δέδωκε τῷ ὕπνω, ὃ ἐστὶ τὴν μέλαιναν κατάστασιν. He takes μέλαιναν αἴγλαν to mean 'darkness,' and the sense of the passage to be διεδέξατο ἡ νύξ τὸ πῦρ, σβεσθέντος γὰρ αὐτοῦ ἐκοιμήθησαν, 'and in the houses the bright light [extinguished] gave to the sleepers but a darksome glimmer,' such as would prevail all night without any artificial light in the countries with which Eur. was familiar. The note of the schol. suggests that we might read ἀντέδωκεν ὕπνω, which would sufficiently correspond with the antistrophic verse. Perhaps the poet wrote ἀντιδέδωκεν (the schol. writes δέδωκεν). We could then read in the antistrophe, δούλιον ἔσχον ἄταν, 'in their joyance they gat for themselves chains and slavery.' For ἔσχον, 'gat them,' cp. Pind. N. x. 24, Οὐλία παῖς ἔνθα νικάσαις δις ἔσχεν... εὐφόρων λάθαν πόνων, and the commentary thereon. I own I do not understand δόλιον ἔσχον ἄταν, which cannot mean 'they grasped the steed that betrayed them,' and is very feebly expressed if it merely signifies 'they were betrayed.' However we take the passage, ὕπνω means 'to sleep,' in the sense of 'to such as slept,' for, as the context shows, many watched.

551. ὄρεστέραν, Ar. Lys. 1262 calls her ἀγροτέρα... "Ἄρταμι σηροκτόνε... παρσένε σιά... κυναγέ.

554. κόραν, sc. "Ἄρτεμιν, which word indeed the mss. supply, but the metre shows it to be a gloss.

557. βρέφη, 'the sweet infants clung with scared hands to their mothers' skirts.' Cp. 745, 1090. For the sing. ματρί, cp. σῶμα δ' ἐς ἡβην ἦλθεν τέκνων, Med. 1008; ἐκίνουν θύρσον, Bacch. 724, where see note:

560. λόχου. Here λόχου is 'the place of ambush,' the horse; ἔργα is in apposition to the foregoing clause, "quae quidem omnia Minervae consilio facta sunt."

564. καράτομος. This extremely bold expression can by no means be rendered literally in English. The meaning is 'the young men butchered, alone and defenceless, added laurels to the crown of Hellas, nursing mother of brave boys.' The adj. καράτομος refers in sense rather to νεανιῶν than to ἐρημία. Cp. 533. The mss. give νεανίδων, but this must be wrong. The young women would be carried away as captives; the young men who were butchered would be such as were surprised alone, and so could not offer any successful resistance.

570. εἰρεσία μαστῶν. This again is a very bold expression. It has been explained absurdly in many ways. Musgrave holds that as Andr. is said πορθμείεσθαι, which is an allusion to a ship, so Ast. is said to follow behind like a boat towed after a ship, impelled mammarum desiderio. Others, supposing Ast. to be in the carriage with Andr., render, 'close to his mother's breasts, shaken with the motion of the carriage.' It need hardly be said that Eur. would not have written anything so absurd as this; and against Musgrave's explanation, among other considerations, it may be urged that Ast. was certainly not a suckling at this period. I fancy that in this bold expression there must be a reminiscence of the use of ἔρεσσειν in the sense of the 'measured rhythmical planctus or beating of the breast,' by which Greek women expressed their grief; cp. γῶων ... ἐρέσσετε ... χεροῖν πίτυλον, Aesch. Theb. 855; ἔρεσσ' ἔρεσσε καὶ στέναζε, Pers. 1046. So here παρὰ εἰρεσία μαστῶν must (by a very bold use of language) mean παρὰ μητρὶ μαστοῦς ἐρεσσοῦση, 'beside his mother, who is beating her breasts' as the car advances. παρὰ εἰρεσία μαστῶν = παρὰ μητρὶ μαστοῦς ἐρεσσοῦση is not more bold than καράτομος ἐρημία νεανιῶν - νεανίαι καράτομοι ἐν ἐρημία. Matth. understands εἰρεσία μαστῶν to mean 'her heaving breasts'; but this is as daring an expression as is implied in my explanation, and is not in accordance with the almost technical usage of ἐρέσσειν = plangere. Cp. διερέσσειν of wild impassioned waving of torches, 1258. We might, however, take παρὰ as an adverb, and understand εἰρεσία μαστῶν to mean 'borne on the breast.' The Greek poets are fond of figures taken from rowing, as in πτερύγων ἐρετμοῖσιν, Ag. 52; and (a still closer parallel) a poet quoted by Athenaeus, xv. 699A, has εἰρεσίῃ γλώσσης ἀποπέμφομεν εἰς μέγαν αἶνον: so here εἰρεσία μαστῶν might mean literally, 'by the oarage, conveyance, of her breast,' i.e. 'borne on his mother's breast.' But the chief objection to this view seems to be that Ast. is not described as a child of such very tender age throughout the play. Verse 1171 clearly shows that Ast. was not an infant; for how could he observe and perceive the royal attributes of his father's state? (This difficulty, however, would be avoided by accepting Prof. Crossley's view of 1171, that the οὐκ is drawn back, and qualifies γνοῦς and ιδῶν as well as οἶσθα: see note on 1171.) But ἔπεται seems a strange word to describe an infant borne on his mother's breast. The version of L. and S., 'clasped close to her throbbing breasts,' is hardly to be found in the Greek words. Mr. E. G. Butler of Ennis College takes ἔπεται as meaning 'keeps time with,' 'follows the motions of,' a sense somewhat supported by ἐσπόμενος δουρί, M. 395. Ast. might be borne on her throbbing breasts, though not a suckling, and with them he would rise and fall. Mr. Stanley would read παρὰ δ' εἰρεσίαις ἀστῶν. He conceives that Andr. is brought on the stage in an ἐκκύκλημα, like Euripides in The Acharnians. The men pushing it along are compared to rowers. The young Ast. walks beside them. For the plur. of εἰρεσία he compares Orph. Arg. 374, 1039; and for the concrete meaning and defining genitive, Soph. Phil. 936, Aesch. Pers. 914. He notices that there is no allusion to horses or mules yoked to the car, as there is in the Electra when Clytae-mnestra comes on the stage. Dr. Joseph Heinsch (Comment. Eurip. Specimen, Glatz. 1886) conjectures παρ' ἀπειρέσια κλαίων ἔπεται, comparing Soph. Aj. 927, ἀπειρεσίων πόνων, and Q. Smyrn. ἀπειρέστον κεχάροντο. He also suggests παρὰ δ' ἀπτόμενος μαστῶν, comparing ἦψω δὲ γονάτων, Hec. 245; ἄψαι μητρός, 439; ποδῶν ἐφηπτόμην, ἄψασθαι, Chr. Pat. 2104, 2453; χρωτὸς ἄψασθαι, ibid. 464; ποδῶν ἐφάπτομαι, ibid. 773, all of which references have their weight, as the Troades is one of the plays of which the cento is composed. If I ventured to ascribe to Eur. epic diction at all, I would borrow from it more largely, and read παρ δ' ἀπείρεισι' ἀλαστῶν ἔπεται, 'beside her follows sore distraught,' thus avoiding the asyndeton and adhering closely to the mss. For ἀλαστῶν, cp. Leaf on M. 163, not L. and S., who give a meaning incompatible with the usage of the word and with its presumed etymology.

572. νῶτοισι. So νῶτον is applied to any flat surface, the sea, the land, a rock, an altar, and (with a metaphorical allusion to a horse) it is used of a tree in Bacch. 1074.

576. ἀπό, sc. λελησμένοις ἀπὸ Τροίας.

577-601. This beautiful antiphony may be compared with the solemn litanies of the Persae.

578. ἐμόν, 'Why keenest thou this coronach; 'tis mine.' Andr. says that her case is so piteous that ᾠμοι belongs to her as of right; τῶνδ' ἀλγέων is the gen. after an interjection, as in οἱ ἄθ' ἰθὺς θανάτου τοῦ σοῦ μελέα, Irh. A. 1287; οἴμοι τῶν ἐμῶν ἐγὼ κακῶν, Phoen. 384; φεῦ τοῦ ἀνδρός, 'ah, what a man.' Xen. Cyr. iii. 1. 39. I have preserved ἐμόν and τῶνδ' of the mss. against Hermann's ἐμῶν and τόνδ', which Dind. accepts.

583. ἐμῶν τ' εὐγ. παίδων = ἐμοί τ' εὐγενεῖς παῖδες, the abstract noun being used for the concrete.

584. ἐμᾶς agrees with πόλεος in next verse but one.

585. λαμπρά, 'too evident is the ruin.'

588 a. λύμ', 'thou that wert mutilated by the Achaeans,' i.e. Hector. Such would be the natural meaning of λῆμα. But it is perhaps better to take the word in the sense of λύμη, 'scourge of the Achaeans.' Cp. perniciis in "perniciis et tempestas barathrunque macelli," Hor. Ep. i. 15. 31.

588 b. κόμισαι, 'take me to Hades to sleep,' constructio praeagnans. See on 445.

589. πόθοι, 'deep are these yearnings of us who have to dree this weird.'

“Sore are our yearnings, sharp anguish is come on us,
 O sorrow-stricken :
 Ruined our city is ; cloud over cloud do our miseries
 thicken,
 Sent by the hate of the Gods, since thy son was from Hades delivered,
 He for whose bridal accurst were the bulwarks of Ilium shivered.
 Pallas the Goddess is left amid corpses blood-boultered
 that crowd her,
 Spoil for the vultures, and Troy 'neath the yoke-band of thralldom hath bowed her.”—W.

592. ὁ δὲ σὸς γόνος. Andr. has not heard of the death of Paris by the arrow of Philoctetes (Soph. Phil. 1425). Paris had already been slain ; see v. 952.

595. ἦνυσσε. See on 232.

597. ἐλοχεύθη, ‘where I was in travail,’ lit. ‘was delivered’ ; cp. Bacch. 3.

598. ἐρημόπολις. This is Seidler’s emendation for ἔρημος πόλις : exactly similar is Porson’s μετωποσωφρόνων for μετώπων σωφρόνων (which violates the pause) in Aesch. Suppl. 194.

603. ἀδάκρυτ’, used as an adv., ‘without tears,’ ‘yea, even the dead remembereth with wet eyes’ ; cp. Byron, “And thou who tell’st me to forget, Thy looks are wan, thine eyes are wet.”

604. ἠδύ, ‘what a sweet thing tears are,’ a very common idiom.

605. μουσα. See 120, “the chant with sorrow fraught.”—W.

609. τὸ μηδέν. See on 412 ; for the aor. expressing what is wont to happen, see Madv. Syn. § iii., Rem. a ; Goodwin, § 30, 1.

612. δεινόν, ‘strange,’ ‘mighty,’ not ‘terrible,’ so δεινὸν τὸ τίκειν, ‘strange is the power of motherhood.’

614. ἄλλος τις, Ajax alter ; see 70. ‘Such a one as Ajax,’ i. e. ‘a ravisher.’ The plural is more usual when a proper name is used to denote the type or class to which the individual belonged : cp. Χρυσήδων μείλιγμα, Ag. 1439 ; Λαμάχων ἀπαλλαγείς, Ar. Ach. 270 ; but for the sing. cp. Aesch. Prom. 86, αὐτὸν γὰρ σε δεῖ Προμηθέως.

615. χἄτερα, ‘you are hapless even in your other daughter,’ Polyxena, lit. ‘on the other side,’ two only being contemplated, Polyxena and Cassandra. Hec. replies, ‘Ay, hapless beyond measure and beyond count.’ The construction is, νοσῶ γε ταῦτα ὧν ἐστί μοι οὔτε μ. οὔτε ἀρ. Observe ἕτερος sometimes = ἄλλος: of this a good example is in Hec. 361, τὸν Ἐκτορός τε χατέρων πολλῶν κάσιν. See also 362.

621. σαφές, 'here is plainly told the riddle which Tal. but now obscurely shadowed forth'; πάλαι often refers to the quite recent past in the Attic writers, just as procul in Latin comedy means 'hard by.'

622. νιν αὐτή. Kirch. reads νιν αὐτήν, a common pleonasm in the tragics.

623. ἀπεκοψάμην, 'I smote my breast for the dead.'

624. προσφαγμάτων, 'how heinous was the sacrifice of thee.' For gen., see on 578.

627. ζώσης, 'she was more blessed in her death than I who live'; βλέπειν is, as often, quite synonymous with ζῆν.

629. ὦ τεκοῦσα, 'O mother' (of the sacrificed Polyxena). Musgr. reads οὐ τεκοῦσα, 'O mother, that barest me not,' i.e. mother-in-law; so Ion 1324, χαῖρ' ὦ φίλη μοι μήτηρ οὐ τεκοῦσά περ, but there the final words only explain that μήτηρ is used as a term of respect, as in 1182, 1228, below, and so I would understand οὐ τεκοῦσα if read here; I do not think Eur. would have expressed in those terms the relation of a mother-in-law. Musgr. might have quoted in support of his conjecture, τίκτουσαν οὐ τίκτουσαν, Chr. Pat. 62. But the whole conception of a mother-in-law as a mother is foreign to Greek thought.

633. ἀλγεί, the dead man 'has not the pain of feeling his woes.' There is no need to supply a second οὐδέν. See on 172 above, 1171 below. Mr. A. C. Pearson, finding an objection in the tense of ἤσθημένος, proposed to read τῶν κακῶν δ' ἔσβη μένος. But ἤσθημένος does not necessarily imply any more than αἰσθανόμενος, and if it did we could understand, 'having known what the ills of life are.'

635. ἀλάται, 'wanders away from,' i.e. 'loses,' 'is bereft of,' cp. εὐφροσύνας ἀλάται, Pind. O. i. 94; but the addition of ψυχὴν makes the phrase a little difficult, 'in thought he loses his happiness,' i.e. 'he reflects on his lost happiness,' 'he misses his former happiness,' so Dante's well-known "nessun maggior dolore Che ricordarsi del tempo felice Nella miseria," and Tennyson's "This is truth the poet sings, That a sorrow's crown of sorrow is remembering happier things."

636. ὥσπερ οὐκ ἰδοῦσα φῶς. It was probably this passage which suggested to Seneca the reflections on a future life which he puts into the mouth of his chorus in his Troades, "Quaeris quo iaceas post obitum loco | quo non nata iacent," Trō. 410 ff.

638. ἐγὼ δέ, 'I aimed at high repute, and having gained much of it, yet I was balked of success,' that is, all my plans were frustrated by this great calamity, which has made me a slave instead of living a pattern to wives. τῆς εὐδ. depends on τοξεύσασα. Paley shows that τύχη means 'the hitting the mark,' aptly comparing μὴ 'κ τύχης ὠρμισμένους, 'anchored not out of bow-shot,' H. F. 203.

641. ἐξεμόχθουν, see 873, 'whatsoever things have been devised that are of good repute for women, all these I attained unto in the house of Hector.' So below, 873, ἐξεμόχθησαν = 'achieved (the recapture of) Helen.'

642. πρῶτον μὲν, Dind. has bracketed 642-651 and 656-657. I formerly followed him, bracketing even 652-655. I now believe that Eur. wrote the whole passage, if he ever wrote a line. It is exactly in his vein, and the difficulties are just such as his style presents, but which an imitator would be afraid to introduce. The sentence is very confused. As ἐνθα in 642 cannot mean 'whereas' (though edd. have carelessly assumed that it could), but must mean 'where,' we must suppose that the writer of these lines was going to say, 'In the first place I used to remain in the house, where a woman ought to remain, for not to stay at home ever carries in its train ill-repute, whether a woman's fame be otherwise blemished or not'; but he subsequently modified the form of the sentence in such a way as to leave ἐνθα without any antecedent; αὐτὸ τοῦτο in 643 is τὸ μὴ ἔνδον μένειν, and οὕτου in 645 is τοῦ μὴ ἔνδον μένειν: so τοῦ ἤτις οὐκ ἔνδον μένει, 644 = τὸ μὴ ἔνδον μένειν, according to a familiar idiom whereby the Attic writers, instead of saying ἀγαθοῦ ἐστὶν ἀνδρὸς μὴ ἀδικεῖν, often write ἀγαθοῦ ἐστὶν ἀνδρὸς ὅστις οὐκ ἀδικεῖ. The passage may be analyzed, δόμοις being antecedent to ἐνθα, thus: πρῶτον μὲν παρείσα πόθον οὕτου [i.e. τοῦ μὴ ἔνδον μένειν] ἔμμινον ἐν δόμοις, ἐνθα ἤτις οὐκ ἔνδον μένει, [ταύτη] αὐτὸ τοῦτ' ἐφέλκεται κακῶς ἀκούειν. 'First, I used to stay in the house, where whoso stays not [to her] this very thing [her gadding abroad] bringeth disrepute.' The sentence in prose would have run thus, πρῶτον μὲν παρείσα πόθον τοῦ μὴ ἔνδον μένειν ἔμμινον ἐν δόμοις ἐνθα ἐχρῆν, ἐπεὶ αὐτὸ τὸ μὴ ἔνδον μένειν ἐφέλκεται κακῶς ἀκούειν γυναιξί, κὰν προσῆ ψόγος κὰν μὴ. Cp. π. 294, αὐτὸς γὰρ ἐφέλκεται ἀνδρὰ σίδηρος. The whole passage, 642-651, is found in Chr. Pat.; the difficulty of construction is there avoided by reading οὖν γε for ἐνθα. The omission of the article before κακῶς ἀκούειν is irregular (Goodwin, § 92-93, Madv. § 154). Cp. 1056 below.

646. κομψά, 'the tinsel-talk of women.'—W.

647. εἰσεφρούμην. See L. and S. under εἰσφρέω.

648. οἴκοθεν, 'having by nature a sound reason to guide me'; οἴκοθεν, like domi, means, 'having about me,' 'having a store of'; we find domi est in Cic.; and Cat. has (xxxii. 14) "gaudete quidquid est domi cachinnorum," 'laugh all the laughs ye have' (lit. 'have about you,' 'keep stock of'). See 963.

650. ἀμὲ = ἀ ('in what matters') ἐχρῆν με νικᾶν πόσιν: so νικᾶν καὶ δίκαια καὶ δίκαια = 'in both good cases and bad,' Ar. Nub. 99; ἦδη is the Attic form of ἦδειν, plup. of οἶδα.

655. αὐθεντῶν. This word always means 'murderer' in Eur. We have only the authority of Suidas and grammarians for αὐθεντῆς = δεσποτῆς, which sense is more natural here. In Suppl. 442, where δῆμος αὐθεντῆς χθονὸς would also require the sense of δεσποτῆς, Dind. accepts Markland's conjecture, εὐθυντῆς. It would be easy to read εὐθυντῶν here, but the word may be explained as meaning: 'murderess of my kin.' Hector's murderers were her murderers. Orestes calls Clytaemnestra his murderess because she slew his father. See 920, 921.

659. μισήσομαι, fut. mid. in semi-passive sense, 'I shall get myself hated'; so in Ion 597, 611.

663. καινοῖσι, 'by means of a new marriage.'

664. Cp. Virg. G. iii. 517, "maerentem abiungens fraterna morte iuvenum."

666. καῖτοι, 'yet the brute-kind is dumb, unreasoning, lower than man.' Observe the subject has the article, the predicates have not.

677. κλέπτομαι, 'and I am not beguiled by the phantasy that it will e'er be well with me—sweet were even such a phantasy.' Cp. κρείσσον δὲ τὸ δοκεῖν κᾶν ἀληθείας ἀπῆ, Or. 230; cp. also Sen. Tro. 432, "prosperis rebus locus | ereptus omnis, dira qua veniant habent; | miserrimum est timere cum speres nihil."

681-700. I give Mr. Way's rendering of this fine passage :

“Though never yet I stepped aboard a ship,
From pictures seen and hearsay know I this,
That, if there lie a storm not passing great
On mariners, for deliverance all bestir them:
This standeth by the helm, that by the sail;
That baleth ship: but if the sea's full flood
In turmoil overwhelm them, cowed by fate
To the waves' driving they commit themselves.
So I withal, though many a woe is mine,
Am dumb, and I refrain my lips from speech,

For the gods' misery-surge o'er-mastereth me.
 But, dear my daughter, let be Hector's fate,
 Seeing no tears of thine shall ransom him ;
 But honour him that is to-day thy lord,
 Tendering the sweet lure of thy winsomeness.
 If this thou do, thy friends shall share thy joy,
 And this my son's son shalt thou rear to man,
 To Troy a mighty aid, that children born
 Of him hereafter may in days to come
 Build her, and yet again our city rise."

686. ἄντλον, 'keeping out the sea water'; this word in the tragic poets always means the inimicum imbrem, the sea water which makes its way into the ship through leaks and chinks; cp. ἄντλον οὐκ ἐδέξατο in Aesch. Theb. 796, and the well-known passage, ἀλμιενόν τις ὡς εἰς ἄντλον πεσών, Hec. 1025, where ἄντλον does not mean the vessel's hold, but the inimicum imbrem of the sea. For εἴργων, cp. κληῆθρον εἰργέτω στέγης, Frag. 364. 20.

687. τύχη. Nauck reads φορᾶ, with Chr. Pat. 628.

695. δέλειαρ, 'allurement'; τρώπων is the descriptive gen., see Madv. Syntax, § 54 b, Rems. 1 and 2.

697. παῖδα τόνδε παιδός. Astyanax, son of Hector.

700. κατοικίσειαν. I have given Nauck's correction of ἔν' εἶποτε | ἐκ σοῦ of the MSS.; Ald. reads ἔν' οἱ ποτε | ἐκ σοῦ. A. C. Pearson conjectures μεγίστην ὠφέλησιν, εἶποτε | ἐκ σοῦ. The opt. is attracted into the mood of ἐκθρέψειας ἄν. For this attraction of the opt., see on Bacch. 1255.

709. μῶν οὐ, sc. ἔδοξε, 'is it that he is to have a different master from me?' οὐ goes with τὸν αὐτόν.

713. ἐπήνεσ', 'I commend your reserve, unless your tidings are fair'; αἰδῶ is the 'respect for her feelings,' which seems to make his tale so hard to tell; but if his tidings be good, she does not commend his withholding them so long.

716. λέγων: observe the change of tense in λέξας, 718; cp. ἐμόχθουν and κατεξάνθη, 755; γαμεί and ἐδούλευσ', 962; βαῖνε and ἀπόδος, 1039.

719. νικήσειε, 'may such a vote be carried about his flesh and blood,' an impers. use of the verb which is common enough, see L. and S., νικάω 3.

722. εὐγενῶς, 'let your grief be a noble grief, nor deem you are strong when you are helpless.'

725. κρατεῖ; 2nd pers. sing. pass.

726. ἡμεῖς, 'we are strong enough to contend with one woman.' There is certainly an ironical bitterness about these words which does not harmonize with the tone of the rest of the speech. Hence Nauck proposes ἡμῖν τε πῶς γυναιῖκα μάρνασθαι μίαν | οἶόν τε.

729. Ἀχαιοῖς, Nauck and Kirch. read Ἀχαιῶν with V, comparing 638 above. and Bacch. 1100, ἔεσαν ... Πενθέως.

735. τιμηθείς. For the construction πρὸς τὸ σημαινόμενον, cp. 531, 852, and Bacch. 1307, ἔργος ... καθανόντα.

737. εὐγένεια ἀπώλεσεν, cp. Sen. Tro. 500, "grave pondus illum magna nobilitas premit."

737-755. I append Mr. Way's version :

" Thy father's heroism ruineth thee,
Which unto others was deliverance.
Ill-timed thy father's prowess was for thee !
O bridal mine and union evil-starred,
Whereby I came, time was, to Hector's hall,
Not as to bear a babe for Greeks to slay,
Nay, but a king for Asia's fruitful land !
Child, dost thou weep?—dost comprehend thy doom?
Why with thine hands clutch, clinging to my robe,
Like fledgling fleeing to nestle 'neath my wings?
No Hector, glorious spear in grip, shall rise
From earth, and bringing thee deliverance come,
No kinsman of thy sire, no might of Phrygians ;
But, falling from on high with horrible plunge,
Unpitied shalt thou dash away thy breath.
O tender nursling, sweet to mother, sweet !
O balmy breath !—in vain and all in vain
This breast in swaddling-bands hath nurtured thee.
Vainly I travailed and was spent with toils !"

742. σφαγείον is 'a vessel for holding blood,' not 'a victim,' which is σφάγιον. Hence Nauck, οὐ σφάγιον εἶόν : Kirch., οὐ σφάγιον ἴνῃ : but the verse labours under another defect, for τέξομαι, not τέξω, is the Attic future of τίκτω : moreover Ἀσιάδος with an adj. is strange in next verse ; we have πᾶσαν Ἀσιάδα in Ion 1355, but that is not so strong a case as here, for γῆν would easily be understood with πᾶσαν Ἀσιάδα, just as in Ἀσιάδος κροῖματα, Frag. 371, κηθάρας must be supplied. These defects in diction, as well as the weakness of the two lines, seem to betray the hand of the interpolator.

745. ἀντέχει, cp. Sen. Tro. 802, "quid meos retines sinus | manusque matris? cassa praesidia occupas." See note on 1090.

749. συγγένεα, 'kin,' used here collectively, but of a single kinsman in Or. 1233.

753. διὰ κενῆς, 'in vain,' see L. and S., κενός 2.

755. This verse occurs in Med. 1026.

756. οὔποτ' αἰθίς, 'for you will never embrace me more.' Observe, it should be μήποτ' αἰθίς, if the meaning were 'now for the last time embrace me.'

759. βάρβαρα, 'un-Greek,' as Mr. Way renders it. The word could not, of course, mean 'barbarous' in the modern sense of 'cruel,' though it sometimes comes near it, as in Hel. 501, ἀνὴρ γὰρ οὐδεὶς ὦδε βάρβαρος φρένας.

779. στεφάνας, 'the highest parapet,' 'battlement of the ramparts.' In a different sense is στεφ. used in Hec. 910, ἀπὸ στεφάναν κέκαρσαι πύργων, 'thou art shorn of thy coronal of towers,' where πύργων is the descriptive gen., or gen. describing the material of which the coronal was composed.

782. κηρυκέειν, 'such tragical announcements ought to be left to him who is pitiless, and more prone than is my spirit to heartlessness.' τῆς ἡμ. γνώμης = ἐμοῦ, as "sententia Catonis" stands for 'Cato' in Hor.

786. συλώμεθα, 'we are reft of thee,' lit. 'of thy life'; Eur. uses ψυχὴν Ὀρέστου as a periphrasis for Ὀρέστην.

790. ἄρχομεν, 'this is all I am mistress of'; Hec. says that she has nothing now in her power to give Ast., but πλήγματα κρατὸς στέρνων τε κόπους, she can but smite her head and beat her breast in mourning for him. For the former gesture of grief, cp. Cic. Brut. 278, "nulla perturbatio animi, nulla corporis, frons non percussa, non femur, pedis, quod minimum est, nulla suppletio."

791. τί γὰρ οὐκ ἔχομεν, 'what evil are we spared, what woe do we want, to fulfil the sum of our utter ruin?' χωρεῖν διὰ ὀλέθρον = ἄλλυσθαι, and must be distinguished from χωρεῖν εἰς ὀλεθρον.

794. This very exquisite ode is quite Pindaric in the skill with which the mythical glories of Ilium are interwoven and connected with its fall. It is this extraordinary literary skill on the part of Pindar to which Mr. Matthew Arnold has paid a just tribute when he says, "Pindar is literally saturated with the spirit of style." I do not know of any ode in the tragic poets which illustrates better than this the matchless mastery of execution, which is the glory of Greek poetry, and the wonder and despair of all subsequent art. It will be needful to give a sketch of the mythological story, omitting all details unnecessary for the present purpose:—

Laomedon had a daughter Hesione, and sons Priam, Tithonus, and Ganymede,* which latter were beloved of the gods. Tithonus became the consort of Aurora, and was at last (in that his old age was immortal) carried up in a celestial car to the presence of the gods. Ganymede was the cup-bearer of Zeus. Apollo and Poseidon, being under the wrath of Zeus, were made to be in bondage to Laomedon, in the which they built the walls of Troy; but Laomedon cozened them of the covenanted reward, and Poseidon sent a sea monster to ravage the land, to appease the which Laomedon was constrained to sacrifice even his daughter Hesione, to be devoured by him. But Hercules, returning from the Amazons, and seeing Hesione exposed for death, covenanted to slay the monster and save the maiden, for the magic mares which Zeus had given to Laomedon in restitution for Ganymede. Yet Laomedon again forswore his oath, and would not give the mares, albeit Hercules slew the monster and rescued the maid. So Hercules invaded Troy and utterly destroyed it, and Telamon, king of Salamis, was with him, and helped him; to whom he gave Hesione as the meed of victory.

The key-note of the ode is, that Ganymede and Tithonus availed not to avert ruin from Troy, notwithstanding their influence with the gods. Subjoined is a prose version of the ode, which needs a poetical garb to do it justice:—

“King Telamon of bee-haunted Salamis, thou that madest thee a habitation in the sea-girt land, over against the sacred hill [the Athenian Acropolis] where Athenè showed the first sprout of the dark-green olive—a crown and glory heaven-high to Athens fat with oil—of old to the sack of Troy, Troy our town, thou marchedst, fellow-captain with the son of Almena, lord of the bow, when first he led forth the flower of Hellas, being wroth for the mares, and at Simois’ stream stopped his good ship, and made fast the cables from the poops, and took from his barks that which was the cunning of his hand, even death to Laomedon: and the walls chiselled according to the plumb-line of Phoebus with the red breath of fire he brought to nought, and laid waste the land; yea, twice with two succeeding blows the spear of the foeman laid low the bulwarks round about Dardania. All for nought then, thou son of Laomedon, thou that walkest delicately with the golden goblets, thou bearest the wine that filleth the cup of Zeus—a high ministry—and thy mother-land is burning with fire. On the shores of the deep there is a voice and lamentation, women shrieking, as the bird for her brood, shrieking for their mates and their children and their mothers; foredone are the pools where thou wast wont to bathe, and the courses wherein thou didst exercise thee; yet is thy young face beautiful in the calm of its loveliness beside the throne of Zeus; and the land of Priam hath the Grecian spear brought to ruin.

“Love, Love, that didst come into the abodes of Dardanus, touching the hearts of the heavenly ones, how mightily didst thou exalt Troy, when thou didst ally her with the gods—no blame shall I speak of Zeus, but the light of white-winged Aurora balefully, balefully looked on the downfall of the land, and its high places, albeit she had in her bowers from this land a lord the father of her brood, whom the celestial car of gold rapt on high, to be a great hope to his fatherland—but brought to nought are all the ties that bound the gods to Troy.”

796. ἐπικεκλιμένος, cp. λίμνη κεκλιμένος Κηφισίδι, E. 709.

800. λιπαραῖσι, not ‘fertile,’ for Thuc. expressly tells us that Athens was λεπτόγεως, but ‘rich in olive oil’; hence Aristophanes says that those who give Athens this traditional epithet praise her in terms more fitting for sardines à l’huile, ἀφύων τιμὴν περιάψας, Ach. 639.

810. ἔσχασε. See L. and S., σχάζω, II. 3.

811. εὖστοχίαν = ‘his well-aimed shafts,’ abstract for concrete, as εὐγένεια, 583. Nauck escapes the difficulty, or rather mitigates the boldness of the expression, by reading ἐξεῖλεν ἰόν.

812. κανόνων, see 6 above.

814. πίτυλος, any regular, recurring sounds, as (1) of oars (hence νεὸς πίτυλος, ‘a bark with its plashing oars,’ 1123); (2) the splash of falling tears, or of wine into the cup; (3) of rhythmically recurring blows, ‘thuds,’ whether (a) of mourners beating the breast (1236) or (b) of pugilists boxing, whence the metaphor here; (4) of recurring attacks, as of madness, terror, etc.

815. Δαρδανίας, gen. governed by πέρι.

816. ἐν οἰνοχόαις, small vessels for ladling the wine from the κρατήρ into the cups; ἐν = ‘with’; cp. ἐν κλάδοις, Bacch. 110 and note.

824. πλήρωμα, not = πλήρωσις, ‘task of filling,’ a usage which it would be hard to defend, and which certainly is not paralleled in Soph. Trach. 1213; πλήρωμα κυλ. is naturally ‘that which fills the cups,’ and so the word is used in Ion 1051, 1412, Cycl. 209. καλλίσταν λατρείαν is accus. in apposition to the sentence.

825. ἀ: the ellipse of γᾶ might be urged in confirmation of the soundness of my conjecture on Bacch. 406, Πάφον θ' ἄν θ' ἐκατόστομοι for ἀν ἐκατόστομοι which defies explanation. The weak point of my reading was, of course, the ellipse of γᾶν, which I could defend by adducing this parallel passage. However, I now adopt Dr. Verrall's view, which does not entail the ellipse of γᾶ, but of νᾶσος, which occurs among the preceding words.

829. ὑπέρ: observe the hyperbaton of the preposition; βοῶσι must be supplied in the principal sentence from βοᾶ in the dependent.

831. εὐνάτορας. This is the reading of the mss., but it can be reconciled with the antistrophe only by iterating ὀλοόν, a course which I have adopted, following the suggestion of Bothe. The usual reading is εὐνάς, but that makes — — in strophe = — — — in antistrophe, and, moreover, εὐνάς applied to persons = 'husbands,' would be hard to defend. Herm. suggested ἄορας, which exactly suits the antistrophe, without even postulating the resolution of long syllables which is required by the reading in the text. Hermann's reading is accepted by Dind., but the word, tempting as it is, has no authority. We have in Suidas, ἄορες· αἱ γυναῖκες, on which the note of Kust. is "ἴμο ἄορες· vid. Schol. Hom. ad. Il. l. 327." Hesych. has ἄορες· γυναῖκες λέγονται καὶ τρίποδες, and in Etym. Magn. we find ἄωροι αἱ γυναῖκες· γίνεται ἄωροι· κατὰ μεταπλασμὸν ἄορες, καὶ κατὰ ὑπέρθεσιν καὶ ἔκτασιν ἄωρες. Hesych. also has ἄορας· γάμους· οἱ δὲ γυναῖκας. But how could such a word be corrupted into εὐνάτορας? The word used in 1309 below, is ἀκόιτας. Besides, the word here must mean 'husbands' not 'wives,' and for this there is no authority.

836. χάρισι, this might also mean 'through delight in your office'; cp. ἐνοπτρα, παρθένων χάριτας, 1109 below; in favour of my rendering is Bacch. 236, οσσοῖς χάριτας Ἀφροδίτης ἔχων.

842. μέλων, lit. 'being a cure to'; Way renders 'Thrilling the hearts of abiders in heavens.' But see Hcl. 197, Andr. 850, where μελεῖν means little more than 'to be familiar with' or 'known to.'

844. ἐπύργωσας. This word is metaphorical, as in 508; there is no allusion to the building of the walls of Troy.

846. ᾄνειδος. The meaning is: I will not dwell on the fact that Ganyমেদে failed to procure the interposition of Zeus, for this might seem to be an aspersion on Zeus; but I will tell how Tithonus could not influence Aurora to help the city.

850. ὀλοόν. It is more poetical, and more in accordance with the usage of the word, to connect ὀλοόν with φέγγος rather than with ἄλεθρον. I fancy, moreover, that Sen. had this passage in his mind when he wrote, "Memnon cuius ob luctum parens | pallente maestum protulit voltu diem." Tro. 248.

852. ἔχουσα, construction πρὸς τὸ σημαινόμενον, inasmuch as Ἡμέρας φέγγος is merely a paraphrase for Ἡμέρα. See on 735.

856. ἀστέρων, 'a starry car'; this is perhaps the gen. of material, like ἄστρον εὐφρόνη, Soph. El. 19, 'a starry night'; χιώνος πτέρυγι, 'a snowy wing,' Ant. 114; σῶμα σποδοῦ, El. 758; τραύματα αἵματος, Phoen. 1616. Or should we rather take ἀστέρων as gen. of source, origin, 'a car sent from the starry skies'?

859. φίλτρα = 'influences towards producing affection.' I think the correlative word μισηθρον, 'an influence for producing hatred,' should be introduced in Frag. 495, the whole point of the passage being that the female sex are a great instrument for disseminating hatred against themselves, the false bringing censure on the true, until men have no faith in their wives; μισηθὲν is the reading of the mss. The Frag. runs as follows:

ἄλγιστόν ἐστι θῆλυ μισηθρον γένος·
αἱ γὰρ σφαλεῖσαι ταῖσιν οὐκ ἐσφαλμέναις αἰσχος γυναιξὶ καὶ κεκοίνωνται ψόγον ταῖς οὐ κακαῖσιν αἱ κακαί· τὰ δ' εἰς γάμους οὐδὲν δοκοῦσιν ὑγιᾶς ἀνδράσιν φρονεῖν.

863. καὶ στράτ. Ἀχ., sc. σὺν ἐμοὶ ἐμόχθησε, 'I am he who underwent so much, and with me (toiled) the Achaean host.' Cp. 868, which is just the same, the participle agreeing with the nearest subst.

864. ὄσον δοκοῦσί με, 'not so much as men deem by reason of my wife, but rather to meet the man who, false to his host, filched away my spouse.' Perhaps another covert criticism on Aesch. Ag. 400 ff. ὄσον is accusative of measure.

869. Λάκαιναν. He cannot bear to utter the name Helen, a very Euripidean touch of nature; 891 ff. are also very characteristic.

873. ἐξεμόχθησαν. See 641.

874. κτανεῖν. When the infin. expresses a purpose it is generally active or middle, even when the passive would seem more natural, as here. (Goodwin, § 97.)

876. ἑᾶσαι μόνον. 'to give up (the design of) slaying her in Troy.'

879. ποινάς, accus. in apposition to foregoing clause. 'as a retribution for those whose friends fell in Troy.'

884. ὄχημα. This is the nom. ; Zeus is called, 'thou stay of the earth, and thou that restest on it.' The doctrine that the supreme godhead was the Air (which supports the earth and rests on it) is distinctly recognized in Frag. 869, 935 (Nauck), the latter passage being referred to by Cic. N. D. ii. 65. In N. D. i. 29, Cic. ascribes this doctrine to Diogenes of Apollonia ; the following words of his (Frag. 6, Mullach) at all events imply this view, καί μοι δοκίει τὸ τὴν νόησιν ἔχον εἶναι ὁ ἀήρ, καὶ ὑπὸ τούτου πάντα καὶ κυβερνάεσθαι, καὶ πάντων κρατέειν, καὶ οὐκ ἔστιν οὐδὲ ἐν ὃ τι μὴ μετέχει τοῦτον. So Democritus (Frag. 5, Mullach) says, οὐκ ἀπεικότως τῶν λογίων ἀνθρώπων ὀλίγους ὄν νῦν ἡέρα καλέομεν Δία μυθέεσθαι καὶ πάντα οὔτος οἶδε καὶ διδοῖ καὶ ἀπαιρέεται. This hypothesis, that the earth is supported by the air, is ascribed by Plut. (Mor. 896 E) to Anaximenes, and by Aristotle (De Caelo, 2. 13) to Anaximenes, Anaxagoras, and Democritus ; the very phrase τῆς γῆς ὄχημα is applied by Hippocrates to the air. After apparently identifying Zeus with Air, Eur. puts aside the question whether the law of his action is to be found in Necessity or in the Anaxagorean Noûs, but ends by finally expressing his adoration for a mysterious Principle of good which carries on the moral government of the world. Eur. appears to make an opportunity here for himself to give utterance to his religious views, for it is hard to see how this sudden and subtle apostrophe befits dramatically the circumstances of the Trojan queen. Indeed the subject is at once dismissed after a passing exclamation from Menelaus. But it is quite in the manner of Eur., who aimed at elevating the popular views on religious dogma, and purging the latter of its frivolities and deformities. The fine phrase, δι' ἀψόφου βαίνων κελείθου, reminds one of Cowper's hymn, "God moves in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform." For νοῦς as a god, cp. Cic. N. D. i. 11, "Ergo animus, ut ego dico, divinus est, ut Eur. audet dicere, Deus."

889. τί δ' ἔστιν ; 'What ? How strange are these adjurations !' So must we render with the above punctuation, which is usually adopted. Perhaps, however, a better punctuation is, τί δ' ἔστιν εὐχὰς ὡς ἐκαίνισας θεῶν ; 'what mean these new-fangled adjurations?' lit. 'what is the reason that (ὡς = quod) you have so revolutionized the (the customary) appeals to the gods?'

892. αἰρεί, an allusion to the name Ἐλένη, as Aesch. Ag. 761, ἑλένας ἑλανδρος ἐλέπολις, and the (prob. spurious) passage, Hec. 442, Ἐλένην ἴδοιμι, διὰ καλῶν γὰρ ὀμμάτων | αἴσχιστα Τροίαν εἶλε.

899. τίνες: the ellipse of the 3rd pers. plur. of the subst. verb is rare, especially in a dependent question.

901. ἦλθες, 'you (that is, your case) did not come to any formal discussion; the host unanimously gave your life to me whom you wronged.' Most edd. give ἦλθεν, the reading of the schol., but ἦλθες of the mss. is really more idiomatic; cp. 218, and note there. A somewhat similar usage is illustrated in note on 930.

904. θανούμεθα. For the plur. immediately following the sing. applied to the same person, see above 474.

906. τοῦδ', sc. τοῦ λόγου τυχεῖν, 'lest she die without a hearing.'

910. κτενεῖ, not interficiet but interficiendam probabit, 'will justify her death and ensure it.' ὥστε μ. φ. 'so as not to leave a loop-hole for her escape.'

911. σχολῆς, 'this concession will require time,' lit. 'this concession, it is the part of leisure (to make),' i.e. should be made only by one who is not pressed for time.

916. ἐγὼ δ'. 'Yet (taking up) those charges which I deem you would bring against me if you did begin an argument with me, I will reply to your pleas, setting against each other your charges against me and mine against you' (i.e. against Hecuba, Priam, and Aphrodite to whom you will appeal); ἃ σ' οἶμαι κατ. is 'as regards the charges which I think you will make'; ἃ is not relative to τοῖς σοῖσι as an antecedent. We must supply τοῖς ἐμοῖς after τὰ σά. For a similar and equally natural ellipse, cp. note on 285.

919. ἀρχάς, plur. though referring to Paris only; cp. ἄρπαις, the sword of Perseus, Ion 192; ξίφεσι, sword of Ajax, Soph. Aj. 231. So also Ἰππόλυτος ... Πιθέως παιδεύματα, Hipp. 11; Ἐλένην ... τάφῳ προσφάγματα, Hec. 265; and γάμοι passim.

922. δαλοῦ. Hec., when pregnant with Paris, dreamed that she brought forth a lighted torch which burned the city; hence she was warned to expose the child she bore, and Priam gave him to a servant to expose on Mount Ida; but the child escaped, and lived to fulfil the weird and bring about the burning of the town.

925. δόσις, 'what she offered,' 'promised to him'; so ἐδίδου = 'offered.'

926. ἐξανιστάναι = ἀνάστατον ποιεῖν, 'to destroy.'

928. κρίνειεν = προκρίνειεν, 'prefer,' see L. and S. κρίνω, II. 7.

929. ἐκπαγλουμένη. Here ἐκπαγλέομαι means 'to express admiration,' generally 'to feel admiration.'

930. ὑπερδράμοι, 'should (be pronounced to) surpass,' so σὺ δ' ἦσθα ... ἀναξ. 'you (he used to say) are to be king,' H. F. 467; πλουτεῖς ἐν οὐ πλουτοῦσι, 'you talk of your riches and his poverty,' And. 212. So Cic. Att. ix. 2 B, "Eripiebat Hispanias: tenebat Asiam ... persequabatur," "he talked of wresting the Spains from Pompeius, occupying Asia, pursuing him into Greece.'

931. τὸν ἔνθεν, 'the rest of the argument.' I have corrected the reading of all the edd., τὸν ἐνθένδ', which would introduce a very unpleasant asyndeton; ἐνθεν is here, as often, a demonstrative adverb of time.

932. γάμοι, plural in same sense as singular; see 919; γάμοι is here used of her illicit union with Paris; so in Πανὸς ἀναβοᾷ γάμουσ, Hel. 190, the word is applied to 'rape.' 'violence.'

934. οὐτ' ἐς δόρυ. The meaning is, 'neither have you on the one hand, being brave enough to fight, been worsted in battle; nor on the other hand have you tamely submitted, and acquiesced in subjugation without a struggle; no, you faced the barbarians and conquered them.' Literally, 'you are not subjected to the barbarians, either through facing them in battle (and failing therein) or by (accepting) their rule (without a struggle).' Cp. Andr. 680, Iph. Aut. 1400.

935. ἃ δ' ἦντ., 'what was goodhap to Hellas was ruin to me, and I am taunted when I deserve only to be praised.' For the accusative, see Madv. Syn. § 27 a.

936. πρᾶθεισα, 'betrayed,' 'undone,' lit. 'sold,' see L. and S. πιπράσκω, II.

937. ἐξ ὧν = ἐκ τούτων ἐξ ὧν, 'by those at whose hands I ought to have received a crown for my head.'

938. αὐτὰ τὰν ποσίν, 'you will say I am evading the very point at issue,' my clandestine flight from your house.

941. ἀλάστωρ. Paris is called 'the evil genius' of Hecuba. Nauck reads ὁ τῆσδε ληστήρ, and in 942, εἴτ' ἀλάστορα for εἴτε καὶ Πάριν.

944. Κρησίαν. Paris took advantage of the absence of Men. in Crete.

946. φρονήσασ' ἐκ δόμων, Nauck ; φρονοῦσα (or φρονοῦσά γ'). MSS. ; φρονοῦσ' ἐκ δωμαίων, Dind.

948. τὴν θεόν. Aphrodite. Paley would omit τὴν, but see H. F. 1129, τὴν θεὸν ἰάσας, where the metre demands the article.

951. ἔνθεν δ'. ἔνθεν is here a relative adverb of place = ὅθεν, unde ; 'but (to advert to a point) from whence you might draw a specious argument against me.' The point is that when Paris died she should have returned to the Greeks, for then she could plead no union brought about by divine agency (θεοπόνητα), as was her union with Paris brought about by Aphrodite ; her subsequent union with Deiphobus was not θεοπόνητος. She pleads in her defence violence and constraint on the part of Deiphobus.

958. σῶμα κλέπτουσαν, 'trying to escape by stealth.' The pres. part. is also used as an imperf. part. ; she would have said, σῶμ' ἐκλεπτον, 'I tried to escape,' and the part. means the same thing ; see Goodwin, § 16. 2, οἶδα δὲ κάκεινω σωφρονοῦντε, ἔστε συνήστην, 'I know that these were,' etc., Xen. Mem. i. 2. 18.

961. ἐνδίκως. This passage can hardly be sound. Eur. would not have written ἐνδίκως ... δικαίως. It has been attempted to explain ἐνδίκως as referring to the abstract justice of Helen's death, while δικαίως refers especially to the question whether Men. was the fit agent to inflict it ; but no such distinction can be made out. The best conjecture hitherto put forward is that of Seidler and Hermann, δίκαιος for δικαίως, 'how then, justified as I am, could I justly be slain by thee, my husband?' δίκαιος, fem., is common enough in Eur. But none of the conjectures are even probable. I have obelized the passage. But I am strongly disposed to believe that Eur. wrote as follows :

πῶς οὖν ἔτ' ἂν θνήσκοιμ' ἂν ἐνδίκως, πόσι,
πρὸς σοῦ ; δικαιοῖς ἦν ὁ μὲν βία γαμεῖ.

δικαιοῖς is the ind. pres. 2nd pers. of δικαίω, and the meaning is, 'dost thou punish her whom,' etc., or 'thou punishest her whom,' etc. ; for this use of δικαίω, cp. εἴ τινα πυνθάνοιτο ὑβρίζοντα τοῦτον ... κατ' ἀξίην ἐκάστου ἀδικήματος ἐδικάλευ, Hdt. i. 100. It may be added that Chr. Pat. 2594 has the word δικαιοῦσα. Mr. A. C. Pearson would read, θνήσκοιμ' ἐναισίμως, πόσι, | πρὸς σοῦ δικαίως θ', comparing for ἐναισίμως Alc. 1077.

963. τὰ δ' οἴκοθεν κείν'. These words are usually explained as meaning 'that natural gift,' viz. 'beauty,' οἴκοθεν in 648 above being compared ; but this makes it very hard to give a good sense to ἔδούλευσ', of which τὰ οἴκοθεν is supposed to be the subject. It seems to me much better to take ἔδούλευσ' for ἔδούλευσα, and explain, 'and as regards my domestic life in his (Deiphobus') house, I was in bitter servitude instead of being the prize of victory.' We are told by a schol. on Homer, that on the death of Paris, Ἡρίαμος τὸν Ἑλένης γάμον ἔπαθλον ἔθηκε τῷ ἀριστεύσαντι κατὰ τὴν μάχην. Διήφοβος δὲ γενναίως ἀγωνισάμενος ἔγρημεν αὐτήν: Helen therefore was actually 'the prize of victory' (νικητήρια), but instead of being treated as such she was forced to live a life of constraint and slavery. It would seem impossible that Eur. would make Helen say, 'My natural gifts (i.e. beauty) lived in slavery instead of (gaining) the prize of victory'; what prize of victory? Moreover, a passage of Seneca, Tro. 920, written apparently with reminiscence of the passage now under consideration, seems to me to show that ἔδούλευσ' is 1st pers. Helen, in comparing her sufferings with those of the Greeks, says: "Durum et invisum et grave est | Servitia ferre; patrior hoc olim iugum | Annis decem captiva." Busche conjectures καίν' for κεῖν', 'I suffered a new slavery.'

965. τὸ χρήζειν. χρήζειν would have been more natural; but we find the article with the infin. even in much stronger cases than this, e.g. μακρὸς τὸ κρίναι ... χρόνος, Soph. El. 1030; τὸ ... δρᾶν ... ἀμήχανος, Ant. 79; καρδίας δ' ἐξισταμαι τὸ δρᾶν, 1105; so Trach. 1115, Thuc. ii. 53, Eur. Frag. 901. 6.

967. πειθῶ. 'showing the rottenness of her specious plea.'

973. ἀπημπούλα, 'was ready to barter away' (as a bribe to Paris to adjudge her the victory). The imperfect, as Mr. Stanley remarks, refers to what the agent was ready to do, as ἰδίδου, 'he offered to give.' Aesch. 3. 83. See Madv. Greek Syntax. § 113, Rem. 1; and Goodwin, M. and T. § 11, note 2. A very good example is Ar. Nub. 63, προσετίθει, 'she wanted to add.' The meaning is, 'Hera and Pallas would never have sacrificed Greece, and with it their favourite cities, for victory in a trial which was merely a freak and a whim (παιδιάϊσι καὶ χλιδῆ).'

980. ἔξητήσατο, 'asked as a boon from her sire,' not gained as a boon; ἔξαιτεῖσθαι can mean 'to gain as a boon' when followed by accus. with infin., as in Hec. 49; but with accus. οἷ it means either (1) 'to crave a boon,' as here, Heracl. 476 etc., or (2) 'to avert by begging,' deprecari, as in τὰ πρόσθεν σφάλματ' ἔξ., And. 54.

981. μάμαθεῖς ποίει = μη ἀμαθεῖς ποίει, 'do not assume them to be irrational': see L. and S., ποιέω, A. vi. Cp. faciamus.

‘assume,’ ‘make out,’ in Cic. ἀμαθία sometimes means ‘brutishness,’ as in And. 170, but does not mean ‘lewdness,’ like μωρία, ἀφροσύνη.

982. μὴ οὐ πείσῃς, take care ‘lest you fail to convince the judicious’; οὐ was inserted by Seidler, and is to be taken closely with πείσῃς: some word like ὄρα is to be understood; cp. ἄθρει, μὴ τοῦτο ἢ τὸ ἀγαθόν, Plat. Gorg. 495 B; μὴ οὐ θεμιτὸν ἢ, Plat. Phaed. 67 E, where the antecedent verb is omitted, as here.

984. Μενέλεω, gen.

985. ἄν, often found twice in a verse; three times below. 1244.

986. αὐταῖς Ἄμ., ‘Amyclae and all’; Amyclae, a city of Laconia, was the kingdom of Tyndarus, the father of Helen, and therefore the dwelling-place of Helen in her maidenhood. The idea of the power of the goddess to transport Helen with the whole town in which she dwelt to Ilium, was probably suggested by the boast of Zeus, Θ. 20 ff., as Paley suggests.

988. ἐποιήθη, ‘transformed itself into,’ ‘constituted itself a goddess of desire.’ Helen had pleaded that Aphrodite had come with Paris to Sparta, and that it was in vain to try to resist the goddess who inspired her with passion; Hec. replies, ‘she never came or inspired you; it was your own passions which you allowed to exercise on you the influence of Aphrodite: all lewd desires do in us the work of Aphrodite.’ The verb ἐποιήθη might also be explained, ‘was assumed to be,’ as ποίει, 981. Matth. renders “fecit id quod tu Veneri tribuis, locum Veneris apud te tenuit,” thus halting between the two explanations which I have offered.

990. ἄρχει, ‘and rightly the name of the goddess Aphrodite has in it the beginning of the word ἀφρο-σύνη.’ The fact that the first two syllables of ἀφρο-σύνη, ‘lewdness,’ are found in Ἄφρο-δίτη is made the theme of an etymologizing passage which reminds us of Bacch. 286 ff. It will be seen at once that ἄφρο- (ἀφρός, ‘foam’) in Ἄφροδίτη has no affinity whatever with ἀφρο- (ἄφρων, ‘lewd’) in ἀφροσύνη. On the etymologizing vein in Eur. see Bacch. p xxxviii. To this verse is prefixed in Cod. Havn. the word ὠραῖον. This is the word which the scholiasts used to express their admiration of a line; so also γν. = γνώμη or γνωμικόν, and κ. = καλόν. These marginal expressions of admiration often lead to corruption. With the present passage cp. Aesch. Thcb. 578, δὲ τ’ ἐν τελευτῇ τοῖνομι ἐνδατούμενος, where the prophet must be supposed to have said some such words as ὦ Πολύνεικες νεῖκος ἔφους, as in Phoen.

1495, ὃ Πολύνεικες ἔφης ἄρ' ἐπώνυμος : thus the meaning of the Aeschylean passage would be that the seer divided the name into Πολύ- and -νεικες, and repeated the latter half. So here Aphrodite is said to have the first half of ἀφροσύνη in her name; the words could not mean, 'begins with ἀφροσύνη,' nor indeed would this be a true statement.

991. ὄν, rel. to νιν 988.

993. Ἄργει = Peloponnesus; see 242. 'In Argos didst thou sojourn with scant means, and thoughtest that, escaped from Sparta, thou couldst deluge with thy extravagances the city of the Trojans, though overflowing with gold.' But perhaps κατακλύσειν ρέουσιν is proleptic, 'to deluge it till it flowed with gold' (squandered by thee). The sentiment would be more natural if πόλιν could be taken as subject of κατακλύσειν, 'that it would deluge you with gold'; but with the nom. partic. preceding, and the ellipse of σε, this would be out of the question.

997. ἐγκαθυβρίζειν, epexegetic, 'large enough for thy luxury to revel in.'

1001. κατ' ἄστρα. 'not yet translated to the skies.'

1003. ἀγωνία. ἄγωνία, παλαιστρα. Ἐυριπίδης δὲ Τρῶσιν, πολέμον.—Hesych

1004. τοῦδε, 'if the cause of Men was reported to you to be triumphing.'

1009. τάρετῃ δ' οὐκ ἤθελες. Sc. ἄμ' ἐπεσθαι.

1010. κλέπτειν, imperf. infin.; see on 958, and Goodwin, § 15. 3, 'You say you used to try to flee by stealth, letting yourself down with ropes from the ramparts.'

1012. ἐλήφθης. The meaning is, 'why did you not destroy yourself?'

1017. γαμοῦσι, future.

1020. γάρ, for γάρ standing fourth word in sentence, see on Bacch. 451.

1022. ἐπὶ τοῖσδε, 'after all this.' sic re se habente, his a te commissis sceleribus." as the old Comm. explain; cp. 1028.

1024 τὸν αὐτὸν πόσει. 'lookedst on the same heaven as thy husband'; ὁ αἰτὸς often takes a dat. to denote agreement, like ὁμοιος, παραπλήσιος; cp. 1049 below and τὸν αὐτὸν χάρον ἐκλιπὼν ἐμοί, Aesch. Cho. 543. So "idem facit occidenti." 'as if he killed,' Hor. A. P. 467; "eadem facit omnia turpi." 'same as an ugly woman,' Lucr. iv. 1168.

1025. ἔρειπλοις, 'in tattered weeds,' usually of 'wrecks' or 'ruins,' used of 'carcases' of slaughtered sheep in Soph. Aj. 308, and as here in Niobe of Soph., λεπτοσπαθήτων χλανιδίων ἔρειπλοις (Frag. 400, Dind.).

1026. ἀπεσκ. Properly 'scalped'; here, as in El. 241, ἔσκηθισμένον, 'shorn bare.' Hdt. iv. 64, describes how the Scythians scalped their slain.

1032. θνήσκειν, 'that she shall die,' the pres. infin. is found instead of the fut. when it follows verbs of commanding, such as θὲς νόμον here; as εἰπὼν μηδένα παριέναι εἰς τὴν ἀκρόπολιν, 'having given orders that no one should pass into the citadel,' Xen. Hell. v. 2. 29; Goodwin, § 15, 2, note 3.

1034. πρὸς Ἑλ. ψόγον, 'save yourself from a charge of unmanliness on the part of Hellas'; ψόγον πρὸς Ἑλλ. is 'blame from Greece,' and τὸ θῆλυ is added to specify the nature of the charge to be brought against Men. Cp. Med. 218, δύσκειαν ἐκτήσαντο καὶ ῥαθυμίαν, where the meaning is δύσκειαν ῥαθυμίας, as here the meaning is ψόγον θηλότητος.

1036. ἐμοί, 'you have come to the same judgment as I, that she, of free will, left my house for a stranger's bed, and the Cyprian goddess has been brought into her plea but for the sake of speciousness.' ἐνέιται, perf. pass. of ἐνίημι. The point in the whole case regarded as most cardinal by Helen, Hecuba, and Menelaus, is the question whether agency of Aphrodite can be proved in extenuation—a strong contrast to the modern point of view. Helen has recourse to it again in 1042.

1040. ἀπόδος, 'atone for,' as in I. 387, πρίν γ' ἀπὸ πᾶσαν ἐμοὶ δόμεναι θυμαλγέα λάβην. The word really means only reddere.

1044. μὴ προδῶς. For μὴ with aor. subj. in prohibitions, see Goodwin, § 86.

1046. δ', 'for I at once declare my indifference to her.' See on 53 above. δὲ sometimes connects two clauses which stand to each other in the relation of cause and effect, and to some extent = γάρ: cp. Z. 160, τῷ δὲ γυνὴ Προίτου ἐπεμήνατο. 'for the wife of P.'

1049. σοὶ ταύτόν, see on 1024. This passage is extremely skilful. Hec. still fears the influence of Helen's fascinations, and says, 'let her not embark on the same ship with thee.' Men. replies with scornful confidence in his resolution, 'What, is she then heavier than of yore! will she sink the vessel?' Hec. 'He is no lover who loves not for ever.' Men. 'That is as the heart of the loved one may have proved.' Cp. for the sentiment Andromeda (Frag. 140), ὄσοι γὰρ εἰς ἔρωτα πίπτουσιν βροτῶν | ἐσθλῶν ὅταν τύχῳσι τῶν ἐρωμένων | οὐκ ἔσθ' ὁποίας λείπεται τόθ' ἡδονῆς. Very like 105 in expression is Moore's "The heart that once truly loved never forgets, But fondly loves on to the close"; but the meaning of the Greek verse is rather that when a man is once strongly enamoured, the feeling can always be aroused again. It is more like "They sin who tell us love can die," Southey, Curse of Kehama, a. 10.

1057. θῆσει. τιθέναι, with dat. without prep. is a poetical usage, e.g. χέρσω ... θείναι, Hel. 1064; ἔθηκε ... ζυγάστρω δῶρον, Soph. Trach. 691; 'she will put in all women continence,' e.g. 'she will inspire them with a regard for continence.' He adds, 'This is no easy task; yet her downfall will alarm their incontinence, even though they be yet more hateful than she is.' But certainly σωφρονεῖν πάσαισι θῆσει is a very harsh expression, especially as there is no article before σωφρονεῖν. To read πάσαις ἐνῆσει would be an improvement; but a word is needed which would mean 'to warn,' 'to enjoin on'; perhaps we might read φήσει for θῆσει, 'she will (by her fate) tell all women to be chaste.'

1060. Mr. Way's spirited version is as follows:

"So then thy temple in Troy fair-gleaming,
And thine altar of incense heavenward steaming,
Hast thou rendered up to our foes Achæan,
O Zeus, and the flame of our sacrificing,
And the holy burg with its myrrh-smoke rising,
And the ivy-mantled glens Idaean
Overstreamed with the wan snow riverward-rushing,
And the haunted bowers of the World's Wall, flushing
With the first shafts flashed through the empyrean!

"Thine altars are cold; and the blithesome calling
Of the dancers is hushed; nor at twilight's falling
To the night-long vigils of gods cometh waking.
They are vanished, thy carven images golden,
And the twelve moon-feasts of the Phrygians holden.
Dost thou care, O King, I muse, heart-aching,— Thou who sittest on high in the far blue heaven
Enthroned,—that my city to ruin is given,
That the bands of her strength is the fire-blast breaking?

"O my beloved, O husband mine,
Thou art dead, and unburied thou wanderest yonder,
Unwashen!—but me shall the keel thro' the brine
Waft, onward sped by its pinions of pine,

To the horse-land Argos, where that stone wonder
 The Cyclop walls cleave the clouds asunder.
 And our babes at the gates, in a long, long line,
 Cling to their mothers with wail and with weeping that cannot avail—
 ‘O mother,’ they moan, ‘alone, alone, woe’s me! the Achaeans hale
 Me from thy sight—from thine—
 To the dark ship, soon o’er the surge to be riding,
 To Salamis gliding,
 To the hallowed strand,
 Or the Isthmian hill ’twixt the two seas swelling,
 Where the gates of the dwelling
 Of Pelops stand!’

“Oh that, when, far o’er the mid-sea sped,
 Menelaus’ galley is onward sailing,
 On the midst of her oars might the thunderbolt dread
 Crash down, the Aegean’s wildfire red,
 Since from Ilium me with weeping and wailing
 Unto thralldom in Hellas hence is he haling :
 And lo, Zeus’ daughter, like maid unwed,
 Hath joy of her mirrors of gold, and her state as of right doth she hold !

Nevermore may he come to Laconia, home of his sires :
 be his hearth aye cold !

Never Pitanê’s streets may he tread,
 Nor the Goddess’s temple brazen-gated,
 With the evil-fated
 For his prize, who for shame
 Unto all wide Hellas’s sons and daughters,
 And for woe to the waters
 Of Simois, came !

“Woe’s me, woe’s me !

Afflictions new, ere the old be past,
 On our land are falling ! Behold and see,
 Ye wives of the Trojans, horror-aghast,
 Dead Astyanax, by the Danaans cast
 From the towers, slain pitilessly.”

1064. αἰθερίας, ‘the smoke of the myrrh as it (when burnt) mounts high into air,’ cp. 325, and αἰθερία δ’ ἀνέπτα, Med. 440.

1069. πρωτόβολον, ‘and that limit of the land, the holy abode that brightens under the first shafts of the rising sun.’ There was an ancient opinion that Mount Ida received the first rays of sun, which it collected and formed into an orb ; and hence it was supposed to be the boundary of the world on the east; Lucr. v. 662, says, 'Thus they tell that from the high mountains of Ida scattered fires are seen at day-break, that these then unite as it were into a single ball, and make up an orb' (Munro's trans.). So Pomponius Mela, whom Musgrave quotes: "Pene a media nocte spargi ignes passimque micare, et, ut lux appropinquat, ita coire ac se coniungere videntur," ii. 18. Hence Musgrave suggested νύχα λαμπομένην, and certainly καταλαμπομένην is weak, unless taken, as in the above rendering, close with πρωτόβολον ἄλιψ.

1073. παννυχίδες, 'night festivals,' noctivigia.

1074. ξοάνων τύποι, periphrasis for ξόανα='statues,' 'images' of the gods.

1075. σελάναι, the recurring festivals, twelve in all, held on the νομηρία, or first of each month, which was sacred to Apollo. σελήνη often means 'month' in Eur.; here 'monthly festivals' at the full moon, according to some, but more probably on the νομηρία. In the Erechtheus (Frag. 352) σελήναι are round (full-moon-shaped) cakes, ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ αἱ σελήναι πέμματα πλατέα κυκλοτερῆ, Suid., and again ἐν Ἐρεχθεῖ τὰς σελήνας πελάνους εἴρηκεν Εὐρ., i. e. the πέλανοι, or 'sacrificial cakes,' mentioned in 1063.

1077. μέλει, 'on my soul weighs the thought, whether thou mindest thee of these things mounted on thy heavenly throne, even the air.' μέλει is also followed by ὅπως, ὡς, μή: ἐπιβεβῶς with accus. usually means 'lighting upon' or 'going to,' or 'attacking,' but we find the phrase ῥῶθ' ἵππων ἐπιβάντες, and there is here a hinted metaphor from mounting a steed. Eur. affects this metaphor, cp. ἀναχαιτίσειε and νώτοισ of a tree, Bacch. 1070. 2.

1078. οὐράνιον, perhaps for the metre we should read ὄρανον, the Aeolic form, as Dind. does in Soph. O. C. 1466.

1084. ἄλαινεῖς, 'wanderest forlorn.' "Secus inferorum ripas animae vagantur, quorum corpora sepultura carebant," Barnes.

1085. ἄνυδρος, 'without the lustral water,' which formed part of the rite of sepulture. See 1152.

1088. νέμονται, '(men) inhabit,' τείχη being accus.; but it is quite possible that τείχη is nom., and the subject of the verb νέμονται, though τείχη is neut. and νέμονται plur.; for τείχη implies and really means πύλαις. We have already had many instances of this constr. πρὸς τὸ σημαίνον in this play. See on 119, 531, 735, 852, 1090, 1209, 1223. Neut. plur. with plur. verb is a common epic usage, as in καὶ δὴ δοῦρα σέσηπε νεῶν καὶ σπάρτα λέλονται, B. 135.

1090. κατὰφορα agrees with τέκνα implied in τέκνων πλήθος. κατῆφορα (ἀείρω) is 'hanging from their mothers' clothes,' cp. ἄλοχον ... ὑποσειραίους ... ἔλκουσαν, H. F. 445; ἐκκρήμασθε πατρῶων πέπλων, H. F. 520; μέθεσθ' ἐμῶν πέπλων, H. F. 627. The rest of the strophe is the cry of the children.

1094. ναῦν: after this word some words like ὥστε με πέμπειν must be understood; 'they are bearing me to the dark hulk to take me to Salamis or Corinth.'

1097. δίπορον κορ. "Ἴσθ. = the peak of Acrocorinthus on the isthmus, commanding two straits; δίπορον = himareu.

1098. πύλας, 'where the holds of Pelops have their gate'; the isthmus is the gate of Peloponnesus.

1100–1105. Μενέλα, gen.; the nom. has three forms, Μενέλαος, Μενέλεως, Μενέλας. ἀκάτου ιούσας is the gen. absolute; 'would that, while the bark of Men. was walking the mid-most main, an awful levin bolt of the Aegaeon, hurled with both hands (by Zeus) would fall in the midst of the oars.' ἰέναι, with accus. = 'to traverse,' is common in Attic; Homer uses the gen., not accus. πλατᾶν (gen. plur.) is Seidler's correction of πλάταν of the MSS.; but the passage still labours under difficulties, some reference to Zeus as the hurler of the lightning seems required; hence Reiske thought that δίπαλτον might mean διᾶ-παλτον, but there is no analogy for such a word. Musgrave again conjectured 'Ἰδαίου (sc. Διός) for Αἰγαίου, which last word indeed is far from satisfactory; if sound, Αἰγαίου πῦρ must be 'a bolt such as often descends on the Aegaeon,' which is noted for its thunder-storms. In favour of Musgrave's conjecture it may be urged that Zeus is described in the Iliad as "Ἰδηθεν μεδέων, and we have ὅς Διὸς ἱρεὺς | Ἰδαίου ἐτέτυκτο, II. 606. We have in Hel. 130, μέσον περῶσι πέλαγος Αἰγαίου πόρου, but the order of the words here quite precludes the possibility of connecting πέλαγος Αἰγαίου (πόρου being understood).

1104. ὅτε, 'now that,' with a semi-causal sense, as in Ar. Nub. 34, Ach. 647, Soph. Aj. 1095, etc. See 1162 below.

1105. γάθεν, 'from my country Ilium'; cp. "Thebis indidem," 'from the same Thebes,' Nep. Eram. v. 2.

1107. χάριτας, see on 836, 'the delight of girls'; cp. Or.

1112. Διὸς κόρα is, of course, Helen, who is supposed by the chorus to be in the enjoyment of her wonted luxuries. They have no faith in Menelaus' intention of putting her to death. χρῖσσεα ... κορὰ is parenthetical. The subject of ἔλθαι in next verse is Μενέλεως.

1111. Πιτάνας, one of the divisions of the city of Sparta.

1112. χαλκόπυλόν τε ρεάν, Athenè Chalcioecus, who had a temple in the acropolis of Lacedaemon.

1114. ἔλών, 'having captured her who by her adultery brought scathe and scorn on mighty Hellas, and bitter woe on the waters of Simois.' Again, ἔλών is used with a play on the name Ἐλένη.

1118. καινῶν, gen. after μεταβάλλουσαι, 'here are new mishaps coming in exchange for (i.e. in succession to) others still new'; μετ. is intrans.

1122. ἔχουσιν, see on 317; the connection of the aor. part. with ἔχω, to denote at once the preceding action and the present state, is almost a periphrasis of the perfect; the usage is mostly confined to the poets, but is found not unfrequently in Xenophon, where however it is the perf. part. not the aor. that is joined with ἔχω. The aor. in this phrase has that present signification which is commented on in note on 53 above.

1123. πίτυλος, 'the steady sweep of one ship's oarage that was left behind is to take the rest of the spoils of Neoptolemus to Phthia'; see 816. λελ. refers in grammar to πίτυλος and in sense to νεώς: see 533, 564.

1126. ἀνήκται, 'has set sail'; ἀνάγειν ναῦν and ἀνάγειν absol. are used in the sense of 'to put a ship to sea,' lit. 'to lead up'; the ship at sea, appearing to be raised toward the horizon line, is said to be μετέωρος. The anapaest in the fourth foot is quite justifiable in the case of a proper name, the first two syllables of Νεοπτόλεμος are pronounced as one.

1129. οὐ θᾶσσον οὔνεκ', lit. 'being influenced by which consideration more than (by) having any pleasure in staying, he is gone,' (i.e. 'more than any convenience he might have found in waiting to see all his prizes put on board'). The phrase is somewhat contorted, and many conjectures have been made, especially οὐ for ἤ (Seidler), ἔχειν for ἔχω (Hermann), i.e. 'too quickly to feel any pleasure in staying.' But there is no occasion for change. Cp. Soph. O. C. 890, οὐ χάριν | δεῦρ' ἦξα θᾶσσον ἢ καθ' ἡδονὴν ποδός.

1131. ἀγωγός, 'drawing from me many a tear'; we have ἀγειν δάκρυ in this sense in Alc. 1081.

1134. θάψαι, sc. τινά, 'she asked of Neopt. that Ast. might be buried,' cp. παῖδας δὲ μείναι τοὺς ἐμοὺς αἰτήσομαι, Med. 780, 'I will pray that they may remain.' Barnes proposed σ' for σφ', and Nauck κᾶυ' ἠτήσατο, but without reason.

1138. νιν is added because the verb πορεύσαι stands at some distance from its object, 'the shield of brass, the terror of the Greek.'

1140. λύπας ὄραν, in apposition to the foregoing clause, μή νιν πορεύσαι, 'that he should not bring to the chamber, where Andromache is to meet her new lord, the shield of Hector to be a pain to her eyes.'

1141. κέδρου ... λαίγων. The words refer to the modes of burial customary at Athens. "Recent investigations of numerous graves in the Attic plain seem to prove that the burial of unburnt bodies in earthen or wooden coffins or in grave-chambers cut from the living rock, was at least as prevalent (as cremation); according to Cic. (Legg. ii. 22), the burying in grave-chambers cut from the rock was even the older of the two. The rocky soil of Attica, bare of trees, made this sort of burial, rather than cremation, convenient for the majority of the inhabitants."—Guhl and Koner, p. 292.

1142. θάψαι, sc. τινά, as above 1134, and τινά is again understood with δοῦναι in next verse. In all these cases in translation the passive voice might be used, the construction having been explained in a note, 'she prayed that he might be buried in this, and might be given into your arms,' etc.

1144. στεφάνους. "An obolus, being the ferriage for Charon, was put into the mouth of the corpse; the body was then washed and anointed by the women and placed in a white shroud (πέπλοισιν, 143). It was crowned with flowers and wreaths, and thus prepared for the lying in state (πρόθεσις)." —Guhl and Koner, p. 289.

1145. 'Since she has now left the country, and the hurried departure of her lord Neopt. has prevented her from consigning the child to the tomb.' For ἀφείλετο μή, see Μαδν. Syn., § 210.

1148. ἀροῦμεν, so Elmsley for αἰροῦμεν of the MSS., see Heracle. 322. This word must come from αἰίρω (fut. ἀρῶ [ā] contracted from ἀερῶ, which never occurs), for the fut. of αἶρω is ἀρῶ [ā]. Now αἰίρειν ὄρνυ certainly does not mean 'to set sail.' We might possibly follow the ingenious explanation of Seidler (reading, however, ἐπαμπισχόντες, 2nd aor. part., not ἐπαμπισχουτες, pres.) and understand 'having buried him we shall raise the spear over his tomb.' This Seidler shows to have been a custom in the case of those who met a violent death, the spear being a sign that the relatives of the dead bound themselves to take vengeance on the murderers. This ingenious view, which quite removes all difficulties in the language of the passage, he defends by these quotations from Harpocration: 'ἐπενεγκεῖν δόρυ ἐπὶ τῇ ἐκφορᾷ καὶ προαγορεύειν ἐπὶ τῷ μνήματι.' Δημοσθένης κατ' Εὐέργου καὶ Μνησιβούλου ταῦτά φησιν ἐπὶ τοῦ βιαίως ἀποθανόντος, i.e. Dem. in the case of a violent death uses the words 'to set up a spear at the burial and (thus) give warning at the tomb'; again (to translate in an abridged form, without giving the Greek, except where requisite), 'Istrius tells us, that in the case of Procris and Cephalus there is a tradition that Erechtheus stuck a spear in the ground at the grave, ἐπὶ τοῦ τάφου δόρυ καταπεπηγῶτα, διὰ τὸ νόμιμον εἶναι τοῖς προσήκουσι τοῖτον τὸν τρόπον μετέρχεσθαι τοὺς φονέας.' If δόρυ could mean 'a mast,' there would be no difficulty, for ancient Greek mariners are described frequently in Homer as lowering the mast into the ἱστοδόκη on coming into port, and raising it again by the πρότονοι when about to sail. But there is no warrant for δόρυ = 'a mast.' However, as αἶρειν τὰς ναῖς, αἶρειν στόλον, are good expressions for 'setting sail,' and as δόρυ certainly can mean 'a ship,' perhaps we may assume that αἶρειν δόρυ might mean 'to set sail.' In that case we ought to read here αἶρωμεν δόρυ, as Mr. Stanley suggests. It must be owned that the Greeks would hardly erect, or allow to be erected, a monument of vengeance against themselves.

1153. ἀναρρήξων, probably means 'to dig in the ground,' not 'to hew out of the rock,' for though the word would rather convey the latter sense, the phrase γῆν τῶδ' ἐπαμπισχόντες is in favour of the former.

1154. ὡς ξύντομ': the meaning is 'that your efforts and mine concurring and therefore abridged for us (in their duration) may start our oar on its homeward voyage.'

τὰπ' ἐμοῦ. The regular construction would have been τὰ ἀπὸ ἐμοῦ καὶ τὰ ἀπὸ σοῦ, because ἐμοῦ and σοῦ denote separate and contrasted sources of action; τὰπ' ἐμοῦ τε καὶ σοῦ ought in strictness to mean the one indivisible act which you and I together perform. Eur. could here have written τὰπ' ἐμοῦ καὶ τὰπὸ σοῦ without any violation of the metre. But the poets allow themselves some latitude in cases like this; cp. τῶν ἄνω τε καὶ κατω, Aesch. Cho. 116; τῶν ἀλόγων καὶ κρατησάντων, Agam. 315.

1156. θέσθε, addressed to the attendants of Tal., who had brought the body laid out on a shield.

1158. ὄγκον. We find ὄγκον τύχης, 'dignity of estate' in Frag. 81; ὄγκον absol. = 'repute,' Phoen. 717; ὄγκον ὀνόματος, 'high-sounding name,' Soph. Trach. 817; but none of these is quite parallel to the present use, 'more renown for war than for wisdom.' Yet we can hardly understand ὄγκον in a sense which would be at least semi-physical, 'O ye whose reasons are not so weighty as your spears.' ὄγκος is 'high-blown pride' above 108.

1160. μὴ Τροίαν ποτε, cp. Sen. Tro. 750, "hae manus Troiam erigent?"

1161. οὐδὲν ἦτ' ἄρα, 'so you prove to have been after all but cowards,' cp. ὅδ' ἦν ἄρα | ὁ ξυλλαβῶν με, 'this is then the one that seized me,' Soph. Phil. 978; οὐκ ἦσαν, 'they turn out not to be,' 'they are not after all,' v. 209. For this use of the imperf. see Goodwin, § 11, note 6.

1162. ὅτε has the same sense as in 1105, 'so ye are after all but cowards, since we used to fall beneath your arms, when Hector was victorious in the fray, and many a doughty hand besides; yet, now ye are so greatly afraid of a child, though the town is sacked and the Phrygians put to the sword.' The passage might be taken thus: 'so ye were but cowards when we used to fall before you, though Hector and many another were victorious in the fray; and now when the city is taken ye are so afraid of a child.' But this would rather require πόλεως θ' ἀλούσης. Moreover, the usage of ὅτε implied in the first reading is quite common, see L. and S.; the words διωλλύμεσθα μὲν ἐδείσατε δὲ = διολλυμένων ἡμῶν ἐδείσατε, and ὅτε goes with ἐδείσατε as well as with διωλλύμεσθα. Cp. "Occidis parvus quidem | sed iam timendus," Sen. Tro. 800.

1166. ὅστις, i. e. οὐκ αἰνῶ φόβον τούτου ὅστις φοβεῖται μὴ διεξ. λόγῳ, 'I commend not the fear of him who fears without probing its grounds by reason.' Cp. Med. 220.

1171. νῦν δ' αὖτ'. This is an extremely obscure passage, and there is no reason why we should suppose it to be corrupt. αὖτ' = αὐτὸ seems to refer to τὸ τυραννεύειν implied in τυραννίδα (or perhaps rather it = αὐτὰ and refers to all the foregoing substantives), but we can hardly explain with Paley and others that 'Ast. had seen with his eyes and known in his mind only (i. e. not in practice and reality) what it was to be a king, but had not had the opportunity to enjoy the honours which he possessed by right in his own house.' We can hardly explain thus, for ψυχῇ does not mean the 'reason,' thus sharply contrasted with experience, in Eur., and even if it did, γνοὺς σῆ ψυχῇ is incompatible with οὐκ οἶσθα. Now ψυχῇ in Eur. means 'the life' or 'the feelings,' or it is a periphrasis for a person, e. g. ψυχῆν Ὀρέστου = Ὀρέστην (cp. 786). It might perhaps be taken here in the last sense: 'You have seen and known what it is to be a king, but you do not know it in your own person, and you never at all (οὐδέν) experienced that rule which was your heritage' (ἐν δόμοις ἔχων); σὴ ψυχῇ being supposed to be the same as ἐν σοί, 'in your own case.' Cp. 1252. Herm. explains: "Vidisti quidem ista, sed nescis te vidisse, neque iis usus es, quum tamen domi haberes." But this version slurs the difficulty in σὴ ψυχῇ: does he take these words with γνοῦς or with οἶσθα? in either case they are otiose, and (more broadly) what would be the point in such a reflection as 'sovereignty, etc., thou sawest and didst understand though thou now knowest not that thou didst'? The late Dr. Kennedy on the appearance of this ed. in 1882 favoured me with the following communication: "I would place ἰδῶν μὲν γνοῦς τε between commas, construing σὴ ψυχῇ with οἶσθα, and taking it to mean the soul, or departed spirit, of the child, which will go down to Hades with no more than a child's knowledge, and so abide there. Cp. ψυχὰς Ἰδὺ προΐαψεν | ἠρώων. This explains the present tense, οἶσθα, otherwise, I think, inexplicable. The sentiment μακάριος ἦσθ' ἄν is virtually the same as that ascribed to Hector by Schiller in his Hektor's Abschied. But Christianity felicitates the child who dies free from human stains. Paganism condoled with the child who died without human glories and memories of human joys. Of course the μὲν ... δὲ (in 1171, 1172) stand as they do, because the 'non-using' is antithetic to the 'seeing and recognizing.' I send a translation of the context from 1167, which will show clearly my interpretation of the lines; οὐδέν is, of course, adverbial:

'O dearest one, how sad thy fate in death!
 For, in the city's front if thou hadst died
 It's champion, having gained thy manhood's prime
 And wedlock, and a monarch's godlike state,
 Blest thou hadst been, if aught of these is blest.
 But now—though thou didst see and recognize
 These things, my child, thy spirit knows them not;
 None didst thou use, when thou wast housed with all.'

The maintenance of the life-state in Hades is well known as the Greek creed. See the Nekvîa of Homer and of Virgil, and the motives assigned by Oedipus for blinding himself. [We might make the οὐκ before οἶσθα negative the whole sentence, as οὐδέν does in 633. The difficulty here would be that the participles ἰδῶν and γνοῦς precede the οὐ which, according to this theory, should negative them, but displacement of οὐ by hyperbaton is not uncommon, e.g. Soph. El. 1062, δαρὸν οὐ for οὐ δαρὸν: Phoen. 877, τί δρῶν οὐ: Hipp. 587, χρῆν μὲν οὐ σ' ἀμαρτάνειν.—H. C.]

1173. κρατός: βόστρυχον κρατός is the accus. of closer specification, σ' being directly governed by ἔκειρεν, 'ah, sad it is that the walls of your country, the ramparts of Loxias, have shorn you of the curling tresses that your mother tended so oft.' The construction is ὡς ἀθλίως τείχη πατρώα, Λοξίου πυργώματα, ἔκειρέ σε κρατός βόστρυχον ὃν πόλλ' ἐκήπενυσε κ.τ.λ.

1176. φιλήμασιν τ' ἔδωκεν, 'gave up to kisses'; cp. λουτροῖς χρῶα ἔδωκε, Hel. 1383.

1177. ἴν' αἰσχροῖα μὴ λέγω. This passage is generally explained by edd. as if Eur. had used the words ἔνθεν ἐκγελάσσειων ῥαγέντων φόνος to avoid employing ἐκκέχυται ἐγκέφαλος, and they have inferred that ἐγκέφαλος was regarded as a coarse and disgusting word by the Greeks. This is quite wrong. Homer often uses ἐγκέφαλος, and so does Eur. himself, and no reflecting person could deny that the expression in the text is absolutely shocking, if ἐκκέχυται ἐγκέφαλος is coarse. The fact is, neither expression is shocking, but the phrase in the text is so vigorous that Eur. adds, 'not to say anything shocking.' This phrase always introduces an apology for something said or about to be said, and does not refer to a phrase suppressed lest it should prove offensive; it does not explain the reason why the phrase used is employed and another avoided, but asks the indulgence of the hearers for the phrase used: the words ἵνα μὴδὲν ἐπαχθῆς εἶπω in Dem. always introduce some phrase which he fears may possibly for some reason offend some of his audience. ἔνθεν refers to βόστρυχον, 'from which spirits out the gore through the shattered skull.' Cp. "caput | ruptum cerebri penitus expresso," Sen. Tro. 1125. The metaphor of the 'exploding wave' in Plat. Rep. 473 c, is a sufficient comment on the use of the word ἐκγελάσσει. Cp. Frag. 388, κᾶρα τε γὰρ σου συγχεῶ κόμαις ὁμοῦ | ῥανῶ δὲ πεδῶσ' ἐγκέφαλον, also Cycl. 402, and a very similar passage in Soph. Trach. 781.

1178. εἰκοῦς, 'resemblances,' 'how sweetly you remind me of your father'; εἰκοῦς is acc. plur. of εἰκῶ, a poetical form of εἰκῶν implied in gen. εἰκοῦς (which is the ms. reading here), acc. sing. εἰκῶ, acc. plur. εἰκοῦς, but not found in nom. This is a most beautiful and natural sentiment, as also are the reflections which follow; the conception of making Hecuba see in the hands of her grandson something to remind her of Hector, is very touching. The thought is expanded and spoiled by Sen. Tro. 470 ff. and 655; but delicately used by Virg. Aen. iii. 490, "Sic oculos, sic ille manus, sic ora ferebat"; Cp. also δ. 149.

1182. μη̄τερ, used here simply as a term of respect to an old woman; so in 629, 1228.

1184. κώμους, properly of a 'revelling band,' but also of any company, e.g. of hunters, and even of a flock of doves in the Ιόνι 1197; hence Nauck's κομμοὺς is needless.

1188. ἄϋπνοί τε κλῖναι, I have here introduced a conjecture of my own for ὑπνοὶ τ' ἐκείνοι of the mss., which is explained, 'those broken or anxious sleeps,' but where are we to get 'broken' or 'anxious,' and this is the whole point of the phrase? The change is very slight; ἄϋπνοὶ at the beginning of a verse would be very easily changed to ὑπνοὶ, and then ΤΕΚΛΙΝΑΙ having been changed to ΤΕΚΕΙΝΑΙ by an error in one letter, ἐκείναι would, of course, have been assimilated in gender to ὑπνοὶ. Cp. τροφαὶ τε ματρὸς αἰϋπνά τ' ὀμμάτων τέλη, Συγγλ. 1138: ὑπνοὶ and πνοὶ have been conjectured for ὑπνοὶ, but how could such a corruption be accounted for? Here the sense is most natural, 'all my kisses, all my fostering care, all my sleepless nights for thee, all have come to nought.' For κλῖναι, cp. κλισίας, 113 above. The late Prof. H. A. J. Munro suggested ὑπνοὶ τε κοινοί, comparing 54, 58, 706.

1189. γράφειεν, observe the two accusatives, like λέγειεν τινά τι.

1193. ἰτέαν, properly 'a targe made of willow wicker-work'; cp. Virgil's "salignas umbonum crates."

1195. σώζουσ', imperf. part.

1196. τύπος, the mark made by Hector's arm.

1197. περιδρόμοις, subst.

1199. προστιθείς γενειάδι, putting the arm with the shield on it to his chin.

1201. ἐς κάλλος, 'God gives us not such fortunes as to aim at adornment'; cp. ἐς κάλλος ἀσκέει, El. 1073; ἐς παρασκευήν, Bacch. 457; εἰς εἶον θυμοόμιμος, Soph. Aj. 1018, and below 1211.

1204. τοῖς τρόποις, 'life' (or perhaps 'mischance,' see on verse 104 above), 'like an idiot in its haviour, leaps now this way, now that.' ἔμπληκτος ὡς ἀνθρώπος reminds one of Macbeth's terrible description of life, "It is a tale Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury Signifying nothing"; or Tennyson's "Time a Maniac scattering dust And Life a Fury slinging flame." αὐτός ἐστ. - 'is uniformly happy'; the mss. give αὐτός, which may be explained 'of himself,' 'independent of the chances and changes of this mortal life.' With the whole passage cp. the opening lines of Seneca's Troades, and ib. 270 ff.

1207. πρὸ χειρῶν, 'in front of them,' Rhes. 374, Soph. Ant. 1279.

1209. νικήσαντά σε. Another example of the construction πρὸς τὸ σημαινόμενον, see on 119. The accus. is governed by some such word as στεφανοῖ implied in σοὶ προστίθησι ἀγάλματα, 1212.

1211. ἐς πλ. θηρώμενοι, 'not pursuing these public competitions to excess'; for ἐς, see 1201; the poet hints that the competition for success in the public games was pushed too far by the Greeks of his time, who in this respect contrasted unfavourably with eastern nations.

1213. τῶν σῶν ποτ' ὄντων, partitive gen.

1217. ἔθιγες. This is addressed to the dead Hector; 'your death went to my heart.'

1221. καλλίνικε. This ought regularly to be the nom., but it is attracted into the case of μῆτερ as in ὄλβιε κῶρε γένοιτο, Theocr. xvii. 66; cp. Pers. iii. 28, "stemmae quod Tuscorum millesime ducis." Conversely nom. sometimes stands for vocative, as δύστηνος, ἀντὶ τοῦ; Soph. O. T. 1155. οὔσα is the imperf. participle.

1223. οὐ θανοῦσα, 'thou must go to the grave with the dead, though thou diedst not.' θανοῦσα, is fem. because it refers to μῆτερ, of which σάκος is merely explanatory; ἐπεὶ gives the reason why she has said στεφανοῦ, 'receive this garland' to the shield.

1227. ὄδυρμα, elsewhere 'a wailing,' is found only in plur., here 'an object of lamentation.' Chr. Pat. 1518 has ὄδυρμα in the same sense as here.

1228. μᾶτερ. See on 1182.

1231. τελαμῶσιν, 'bandages,' probably strips of the πέπλοι mentioned above: it was the custom of the ancients to wash and bind the wounds of the dead, and even to apply fomentations to them.

1232. τάργα δ' οὐ. Though acting like a physician, 'having the name of one,' yet she cannot bring about τὰ ἔργα, the results of the healing art on her dead grandson.

1236. πιτύλους. See on 814.

1239. Herin. would fill the lacuna by θαρσήσασ', Musgr. by Ἐκάβη, σάφ'.

1240. οὐκ ... πόνου. The reading of the MSS. is πλὴν οἰμοὶ πόνου | Τροία τε ... μισουμένη, which Seidler has endeavoured to explain as follows, "nihil igitur actum est in concilio deorum nisi ut me infelicem redderent et Troiam ante alias urbes odissent," 'so it turns out (see on 1161) that the gods have had but one concern, my woes, and Troy eminently abhorred by them; that their only business was (the inflicting of) woes on me, and the (sating of) their hatred against Troy.' Before πόντοι some word meaning 'vindictively inflicted' would be taken out of μισουμένη. However, by very slight changes, ἐμοί and Τροία and μισουμένη, Bothe explains, 'so then the gods have nothing but woe in store for me, and the eminently hated Troy.' In Bothe's arrangement of the verse, ἐμοί would be in a slightly unnatural position, but not more unnatural than the exigencies of metre could well excuse. I feel sure that Bothe's emendation should be accepted, and that the verse cannot be satisfactorily explained in the way suggested by Seidler. Mr. Stanley suggests οὐκ ἦν ἀρεστὸν θεοῖσι or οὐκ ἤραρον θεοῖσι, but ἄρα is quite requisite, and Bothe's correction of the passage is simpler.

οὐκ ἦν ἐν θεοῖσι = 'the gods have nothing in store for me,' is not a very normal expression, but is helped out by the well-known epic tag, θεῶν ἐν γούνασι κείται.

1243. — — — — The words of Eur. are here hopelessly lost. V gives as the first words of next verse, ἀφανείς ἄν ἄντες, and an obvious interpolator in P gives ἔστρεψε τ' ἄνω, meaning, of course, ἔστρεψε τᾶνω. Many phrases could be supplied here which would satisfy the metre and give sense, but this would be merely an idle exercise of ingenuity in the absence of all evidence. Still more idle is it to endeavour to elicit some meaning from the guess of the interpolator of P, and foist on Eur. some such grotesque reflection as 'had the god swallowed us up by turning the surface of the earth downwards, we should have vanished quite, and not been a theme for poetry.' Equally absurd is the sentiment which emerges if we accept the reading of Stephens, εἰ δὲ μὴ for εἰ δ' ἡμᾶς in 1242, 'only for the utter destruction which the god has inflicted on us we should never have been heard of.'

1244. ὑμνηθεῖμεν = ἰμνηθείημεν, 1st aor. pass. opt. Observe ἄν thrice.

1252. ἐν σοὶ κατέκναψε, 'wretched mother who in your person (i.e. by your death) has torn to tatters all the hopes of her life.' ἐν for ἐπὶ and κατέκναψε for κατέγραψε (which violates the metre) are the conjectures of Porson. For κατέκναψε is usually read κατέκαμψε, the obvious conjecture of Burges, 'has brought to its goal' (metaphor from the δίαυλος). But this is unnecessary. Recent edd. now invariably restore κνάπτω for γράπτω when the metre requires it, e.g. ἀλλὶ κναπτό- μενοι, Aesch. Pers. 576. κνάπτω is properly to 'card' wool, then generally to 'mangle' or 'tear'; κατέκναψε is ἅπαξ εἰρημένον, but that is no reason for rejecting it. There are several ἅπαξ εἰρημένα in the Bacchae alone.

1253. ὡς depends on ὀλβισθείς, 'thou that wert deemed so blest for being the son of such a noble line, by a dread fate hast thou fallen.'

1256. κορυφαῖς. the 'heights' on which stood the acropolis.

1258. διερέσσοντας, διασεύοντας, Hesych., 'wildly tossing their arms with their torches'; cp. use of ἐρέσσειν noted on 570.

1261. ἀργοῦσαν, not to keep the fire 'idle,' to let it do its work.

1265. μορφάς, 'two phases'; it is impossible to decide whether these two phases of the one command refer to (a) the directions to the λοχαγοί, (b) those to Hec. and the other Trojan dames, or to (a') the rest of the captives who are to depart at the sound of the trump, (b') Hec. who is to go at once. In Irh. Aut. 196 Eur. speaks of the πεσσῶν μορφαὶ πολύπλοκοι, and in Frag. 210 μορφαὶ is used of the various phases of human sorrow. Seidler reads μοίρας, Herm. μομφάς.

1272-1283.

"Ah wretched I!—the uttermost is this,
The deepest depth of all my miseries;
I leave my land; my city is aflame!
O aged foot, sore-striving press thou on
That I may bid mine hapless town farewell.
O Troy, midst burgs barbaric erst so proud,
Soon of thy glorious name shalt thou be spoiled.
They fire thee, and they hale us forth the land,
Thralls! O ye Gods!—why call I on the Gods?
For called on heretofore they hearkened not.
Come, rush we on her pyre, for gloriously
So with my blazing country should I die."—W.

1277. ἐμπνέουσ', imperf. part. δῆποσ', 'once.'

1278. ἀφαιρήσει, future middle of ἀφαιρέω with passive meaning. Dind. gives a 3rd future form, ἀφηρήσει.

1287-1302.

HEC. "Woe is me! ah for the woes that be mine!
Kronion, O Phrygian Lord, our begetter, our father,
Dost thou see how calamity's tempests around us gather,
Unmerited doom of Dardanus' line?"

CHO. He hath seen: yet is Troy, the stately city,
A city no more, destroyed without pity.

beating the earth with my hands.' Cho. 'And we too in turn kneel on the ground and call on our lords in the under world.' διάδοχα is neut. plur. used adverbially. The chorus speaks of itself in the sing., though the words τοὺς ἐμοὺς ἀκοίτας imply its plurality.

1313. ἄϊστος, 'unconscious' here, as in 1321; the word often means 'unseen.' Unburied and friendless as he is, dead Priam is spared the consciousness of the present woe. This is a reflection to which Eur. is prone, e.g. κέρδος δ' ἐν κακοῖς ἀγνωσία, Frag. 204; cp. Gray's "No more! where ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise."

1318. ἔχετε. See above on φιλήμασιν τ' ἔδωκε, 1176; so here it would have been more natural to say, 'the deadly fire and the battle spear have you in their power,' than 'ye have in you the deadly fire,' etc.

1320. ἴσα, nom. fem. sing., as the antistrophic verse 1305 shows; 'and (soon) the dust (of the falling towers) like smoke shall rob me of the sight of my home, with its wings spread out on the air.' Some word like περασθείσα must be supplied with πτέρυγι. The dust of the falling towers is expressly compared to smoke, and covertly to a huge wing which shut out the view of the town. Cp. Sen. Tro. 20, "Nec coelum patet | undante fumo; nube ceu densa obsitus | ater favilla squallet Iliaca dies."

1326. ἔνοσις, 'soon shall ruin engulf the whole town.' The falling towers are heard within.

1330. δοῦλειον. This word, like φόνιος above 1318, is oftener an adjective of three terminations, than of two, as here.

DESCRIPTION OF THE METRES.

I HAVE in the following pages given a description of all the metres in the play, omitting iambic trimeters, except when they are so mingled with choral metres as to be possibly not recognized. I may observe here, that the choral senarius is broadly distinguished from the common type of senarius by its purity. The choral senarius properly consists of pure iambs; we sometimes, however, find in choral odes a not pure senarius, but in these cases the long syllable is resolved, and thus is avoided that weightiness which characterizes the senarius of dialogue and narration.

This play is unusually abundant in lyrical passages. Where these passages are not antistrophical, I refer to each line by its number among the verses of the whole play, adding the first and last words of the verse to prevent any possible confusion. In the antistrophic parts, I refer to each verse according to its place in the strophe, and I wish the reader to number each line of the strophe and antistrophe, 1, 2, 3, etc., in his copy. When the strophic and antistrophic verse correspond exactly, I set down one scheme for the two, but if there is any divergence, however small or however legitimate, even the resolution of a long syllable, I then give the scheme both of the strophic and antistrophic verse.

I have avoided technical terms as much as possible. Dactyls and trochees form the staple of every choral ode, and for this reason I should prefer to call a cretic a trochaic dipodia catalectic, but that cretic is a more familiar term to schoolboys. The choral odes are formidable to junior students, because they have been so overlaid with technical language. But let the teacher, instead of lecturing about paeons and epitrites, at once tell his class that most choruses are written in dactyls and trochees, and that there are a few other normal types with which he can become quite familiar after a few days' practice, and soon the task of detecting the rhythm in a lyrical passage will become a pleasant exercise of the ear and the intelligence, instead of a despairing effort of overloaded memory. I think it will be useful here to quote some most instructive words of Prof. B. H. Kennedy. The passage occurs in his Studia Sophoclea, and he is condemning the vagueness of Prof. Campbell's views about the scansion of the choral odes.

“With respect to the metres of this chorus (Soph. Oed. R. 150-175), Campbell says of strophe α', ‘the stately dactylic measures are only once interrupted by the more meditative iambic rhythm (152-160), and by a trimeter with anacrusis, giving a sort of anapaestic turn.’ Again, he speaks of ‘iambic and trochaic rhythms,’ and of ‘interchange of anapaestic with dactylic’ in strophe β'. Again, in strophe γ', of ‘one dactylic or anapaestic line,’ while ‘the other rhythms are iambic and trochaic.’ But, in regard to strophe β', he also alludes to ‘the union of dactyls and trochees in logaoedic lines.’ Had he taken a comprehensive view of the metrical character of the whole ode, he would have given more decided prominence to this last feature, which he only mentions incidentally: he would have seen that the whole character is dactylo-trochaic or logaoedic, with frequent anacrusis, giving not only to dactylic lines an anapaestic semblance, but also to trochaic an iambic air.

“The same reason which exists for scanning, as Campbell does,

ἰ|ήιε Δάλιε Παιάν

also exists for scanning, as he does not,

Πυθ|ῶνος ἀγλαὰς ἔβας

and again,

ῶ | πόποι ἀνάριθμα γὰρ φέρω,

while the line which follows contains (whether so printed or not), two verses:

πήμ|ατα νοσεῖ δέ μοι πρόπας
στόλος | οὐδ' ἐνι φροντίδος ἔγχος.

“It is of course admitted that a trochaic verse with anacrusis of one time becomes iambic, (‘Mary, I believ'd thee true,’ becoming ‘O Mary, I believ'd thee true’), as a dactylic verse with anacrusis of two times becomes anapaestic, (‘over the water to Charlie,’ becoming ‘let us over the water to Charlie’). What I mean is, that whether the scansion shall recognize anacrusis or not must depend on a general view of the metrical character of the whole. Thus, in the third line of an Alcaic stanza, anacrusis must be recognized on account of the dactylo-trochaic rhythm of the other lines.”

The point to which I particularly wish to direct the attention of the student, is the principle so well expressed here by Prof. Kennedy, in the words which I have printed in italics. It was the neglect of this principle which so long obscured the character of the Alcaic and Sapphic stanzas. As an illustration of the unscientific method, let me give the metrical description of the Sapphic stanza as I was taught it at school. Here it is :

2nd epitrite, choriamb., bacchius; the Adonic being of course recognized as dactylic — — — | — —. To remember such a mode of scansion was a misdirected effort of memory. Now a general view of the metrical character of the whole teaches us that we have nothing but dactyls and trochees, and that the metre is :

— — | — — | — — — | — — | — — (ter)

a dactyl standing between two trochaic dipodies, and the Adonic being dactyl and trochee. Horace injured the effect of the metre by strengthening the first trochaic dipody (i.e. substituting a spondee for the second trochee), and precisely similar was his modification of the Alcaic stanza, of which I shall write down the Horatian type as an excellent illustration of the value of the doctrine of the anaerisis in giving solidarity to a stanza, which was once supposed to begin with iambs and end with dactyls and trochees. It will be seen that there is nothing in the stanza but dactyls and trochees :

— — | — — | — — || — — — | — — — (bis)
— — | — — | — — | — — | — —
— — — | — — — | — — | — —

Here also, as in the Sapphic measure, Horace departed from the type of his Greek originals by strengthening the first dipody, in the first pair of verses and in the third verse.

METRES.

98-234. Anapaestic systems, for metrical anomalies in which see note on 98.

239-292.

239. τóδε ... πάλαι. — — — | — — | — || — — | — — — | — ||
— — — | — — | — — dochiac trimeter, two or three syllables having dropped out, perhaps πάρεσθ' or ὁ φόβος, which might be iterated after the manner of Eur.

241. αἰαί. — — | — — iambic dimeter.

242. Θεσσαλίας ... χθονός. — — — | — — | — || — — — | — — |
— || — — | — — | — dochm. trim.

245. τίνα ... μένει. — — — | — — — | — — || — — — | — — |
— || — — — | — — | — dochm. trim.

247. τοῦ μὲν ... Κασάνδραν. — — | — — — | — — || — — — |
— — | — || — — — | — — | — dochm. trim.

250. ἦ ... μοι, see note, where the proper form of the verse is suggested; it probably ran somehow thus: — — | — — | — ||
— — | — — | — || — — — | — — | — dochm. trim.

252. ἦ τὰν ... γέρας ὀ. — — | — — | — || — — — | — — | — — | — —
dochm. dim.

253. χρυσ...ζῶαν. — — — | — — | — || — — | — — | — dochm.
dim.

256. ῥίπτε. — — — | — — — | — dactyl.

257. κλάδας...στολομούς. — | — — — | — — — | — — | — — — |
— — — | — — | — dactyl. and troch. syzygies with short anacrusis.

260. τί δ' ... τέκος. — — — | — — | — — || — — — | — — — |
— — dochm. dim.

262. τῶ. — — — | — — | — dochm.

265. ὦ μοι ... ἔτεκόμαν. — — — | — — | — || — — — | — — — |
— dochm. dim.

266. ἀτὰρ ... Ἑλλάνων. — | — — — | — — — | — — | — — — |
— — — | — — | — dactyl. and troch. syzyg. with short anaer.

269. τί τόδ' ... λεύσσει. This verse is incomplete as it stands. It was probably a dochm. trim; or possibly, ἔλακες being repeated, it was a dochm. dim. with dactyl interposed between the dochmii, thus:

— — — | — — — | — — || — — — || — — — | — — | —

271. τί δ' ... δάμαρ. — | — — | — — — | — — — | — — | — — | — — |
— dactyl. and troch. syzyg. with short anaer.

272. Ἄνδρ. ... τύχαν. — — — | — — | — || — — — | — — | — — | —
dochm. dim.

275. ἐγὼ...χερσί. — | — — | — | — — — | — — — | — — | — — — |
dactyl. and troch. syzyg. with short anaer.: the first trochaic dipody is catalectic—a very common feature in Pindar and the Choral Odes. In fact the cretic foot is really a troch. dip. cat.

276. δενομ. ... κάρα. — — — | — — | — || — — | — — | — — | —
dochm. dim.

14. — — — | — — — bacchii.
